Online Webinar on "Neuroscience of Compassion"

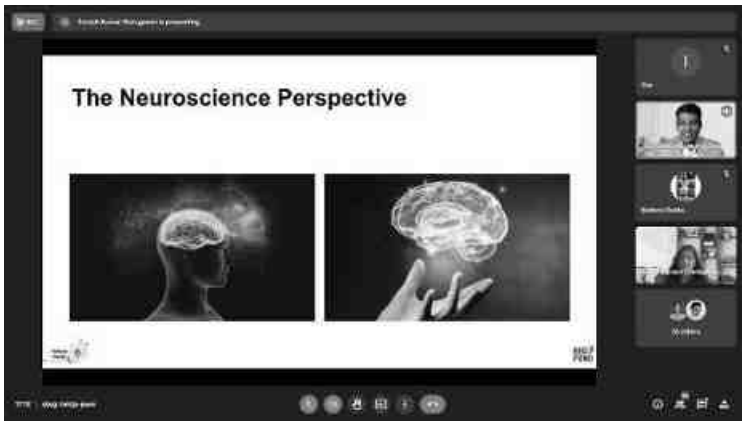
Date : 26.11.2021

Time : 5 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Topic : Neuroscience of Compassion

Resource person : Dr.Suresh Kumar Murugesan, Head -PG Dept of Psychology, The American College, Madurai

No.Of. Participants : 25



More recently neuroscientists have described a third system, the "tend and befriend" system. This system is modulated by the neurotransmitter oxytocin. ... This system is correlated with several human feelings, one of which is compassion. Compassion refers to feeling empathy in the face of suffering. Scientists define compassion as a sensitivity to the suffering of another, coupled with a desire to alleviate their suffering. This makes compassion a separate entity from its cousin, empathy, which is a general shared experience of another person's emotional state, be it anger, sadness, joy or suffering. Empathy usually does not involve a motivational or a "prosocial" component – wanting to help another person is a purely compassionate response.

Compassion is also distinct from empathy in that the feelings generated by compassion could be totally different from those observed in the suffering person. I could feel anger at the injustice meted upon certain members of society, for instance.

Our online webinar on “Neuroscience of Compassion” facilitated by Dr. Suresh, HOD, Psychology department, American College gave us clear vision about what is compassion, the brain area which will responsible for being Compassionate, the difference between Pity, Sympathy, Empathy and Compassion. Thanks to Dr.Suresh.

November month topic-Volunteerism

Workshop on Volunteerism

Date: 21.11.2021

Time: 2.00 p.m. to 4.30 p.m.

Topic: Volunteerism

Resource person: Mr.Ariaravelan, Managing trustee, Ilakku

No.Of Participants: 32 students

Volunteerism is the practice of providing time and skills for the benefit of other people and causes rather than for financial benefit. In an employment-related context, volunteerism is concerned with the methods and tools employers use to support employees that want to volunteer. Volunteerism is a form of helping in which people actively seek out opportunities to assist others in need, make considerable and continuing commitments to provide assistance, and sustain these commitments over extended periods of time, often at considerable personal cost. Several features mark it as a distinctive form of helping.

Unlike the helping that occurs spontaneously in response to emergencies, volunteers typically seek out opportunities to help. Unlike the obligated helping that occurs in the context of ongoing relationships, volunteers typically do not know those they help in advance and have no prior bonds of obligation to help them. To understand the psychology of volunteerism, researchers have identified diverse personal and social motivations served by volunteering, have developed inventories to assess these motivations, and explored their role in the processes by which people initiate and sustain their involvement in voluntary helping. Theoretically, the study of volunteerism is informative about forms of helping that are planful, sustained, and that occur in the absence of bonds of obligation. Practically, it can inform the practice of volunteerism, specifically the ways that organizations can enhance the recruitment, placement, and retention of volunteers.

Workshop on Volunteerism was conducted at Ilakku on 21st November 2021. The workshop was facilitated by Mr.Ariaravelan, Managing committee member, Ilakku. He explained the content based on 5Ws and one H. Before the workshop, he conducted a brain storming game with students that increased their strength and energy and made them to become more attentive in workshop.

Volunteerism in Community

We visited nearby community and distributed Diwali sweets which were sponsored by Nithila Nursing home. Community People felt very happy and keenly asked about our organisation activities. They told if any deprived girl need help for her education, sure they would approach us. Even it was not an advertisement program, people were very much impressed by our way of approach. Thanks to Nithila nursing home for their wonderful support.

Volunteerism in Old age home

We visited Rajaji old age home on 27th November 2021 for volunteer program. When we visited there old age people were invited us and asked us why we had not visited them for a long time. We said due to corona it was not advised to visit them and made them in trouble, and we promised them we are going to visit them often. Then students introduced themselves to old people, they also gave brief introduction about them. They interacted for some time and the in charge Ms.Maheswari gave introduction about Rajaji old age home and its history. Students offered snacks to old age people and also danced with them for different songs. Then we played memory game with senior citizen. It was such a memorable experience for us.

Online Webinar on 'Koshas: The Layers of Yourself"

Date: 08.12.2021

Time: 5 p.m.-6 p.m.

Topic: "Koshas: The Layers of Your Self"

Resource person: Mr. Jothi Arumugam, Ashtanga Yoga Therapist & Psychotherapist, My holism Yoga and Mental Health Academy, Chennai

No of Participants: 14

In Eastern philosophy, the koshas are considered the energetic layers of your body that surround your soul. Sometimes, they're referred to as "sheaths" or "casings. "The five koshas exist together and are encased, or nested, within each other. Your physical body composes the outermost layer, while the innermost layer contains your blissful body or soul. They were first described in the ancient yoga text the Taittiriya Upanishad. This Vedic text is thought to have been written during the sixth century B.C. and provides guidelines relating to spiritual liberation. Some believe the koshas are key to enhancing awareness of your inner world and developing a connection among your mind, body, and spirit. Attention to your koshas may awaken deeper states of awareness on your path to self-realization.

The Webinar on "Koshas- The layers of yourself" facilitated by Mr. Jothi Arumugam, Ashtanga Yoga Therapist & Psychotherapist, My holism Yoga, and Mental health Academy, Chennai gave us a clear vision about the philosophy and history of Koshas, Koshas Vs Chakras, how they relate to yoga and how we can use that for good health. Our takeaway message today, Deep breathing, yoga, and meditation may boost our vibrational energy. Interacting with nature, eating a good diet, developing healthy relationships, and practicing gratitude and generosity can also help.

Online Webinar on "Yoga Exercises for the Eyes"

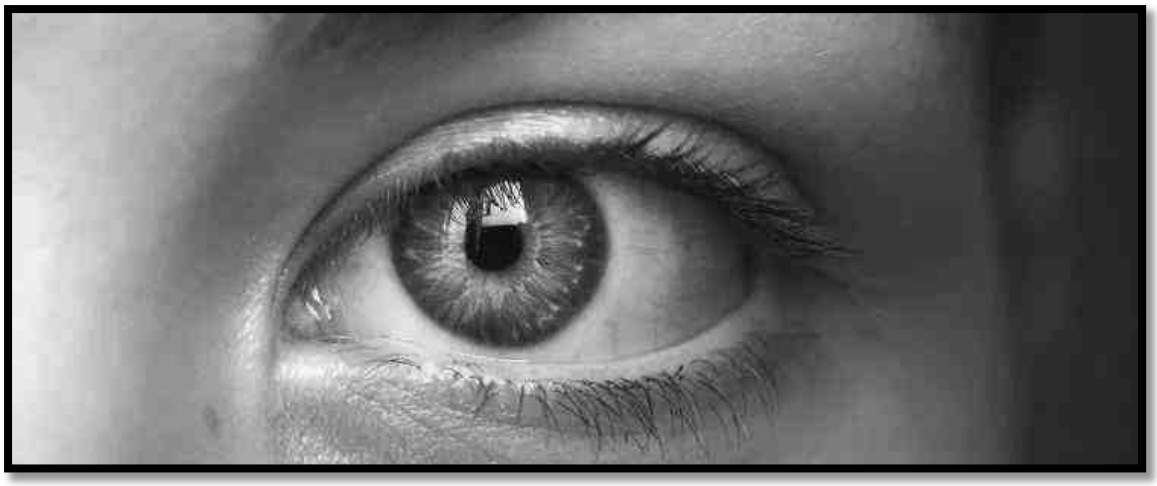
Date: 17.12.2021

Time: 5 p.m. - 6 p.m.

Topic: Yoga Exercises for the Eyes

Resource person: Mr. Ramesh, Yoga Practitioner, Chennai, Tamilnadu

No of Participants: 35



Worldwide, the number of people of all ages visually impaired is estimated to be about 285 million, the majority of them attributed to uncorrected refractive errors (43 percent) and cataracts (33 percent). A report published by the American Academy of Ophthalmology predicted that about 49.8 percent of the world's population would have myopia by the year 2050.

With such alarming statistics, one cannot afford to rule out significant care for one's vision as part of the daily regime. Even 10-15 minutes every day of eye yoga exercises will keep your eyes healthy and devoid of any complications.

These yoga eye exercises to improve eyesight will benefit you ranging from better vision to increased concentration and spiritual insight. Yoga for eyes will help protect your vision from the stresses of light, tension, and other environmental conditions - keeping them refreshed and bright.

The webinar on "Yoga exercises for Eyes" by Mr. Ramesh, Yoga trainer, Chennai gave a clear vision about the reasons for eyesight problems, how to avoid them, the best yoga practices for Eyes, etc. In the session itself, he made us practice the yoga exercises for the bright vision of the eyes, it was a participatory session.

Online Webinar on "Neuroscience of Gratitude"

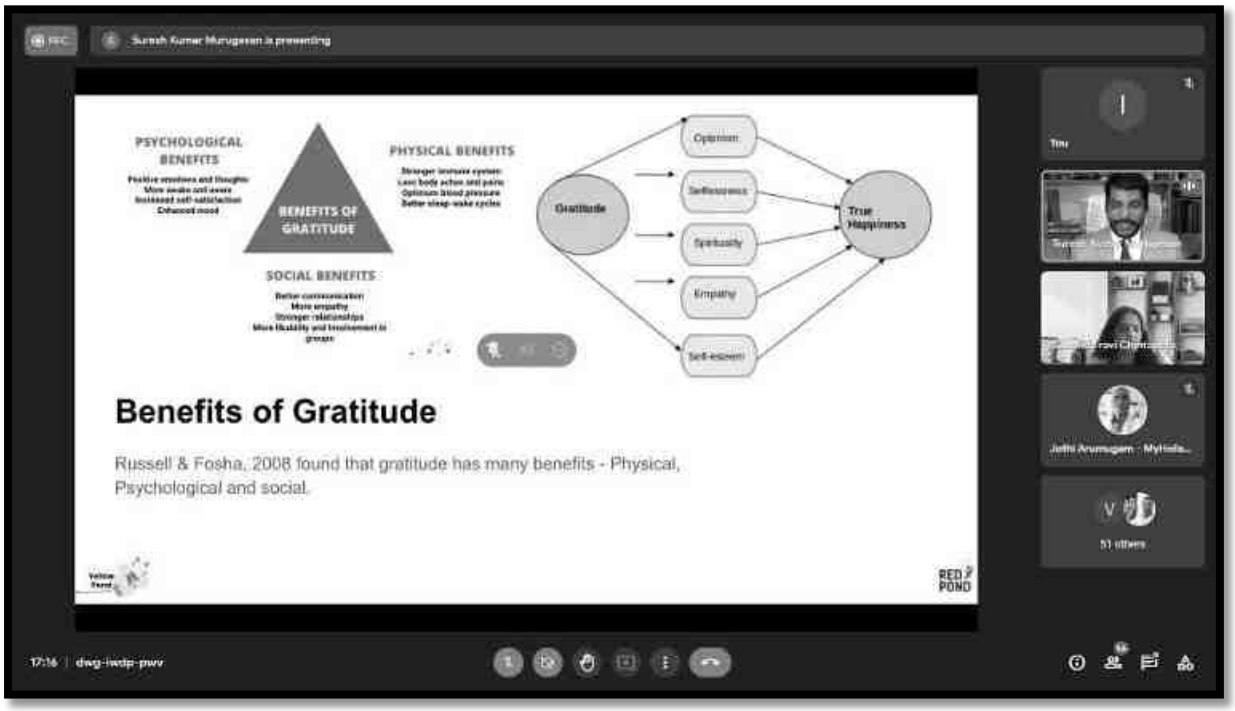
Date: 24.12.2021

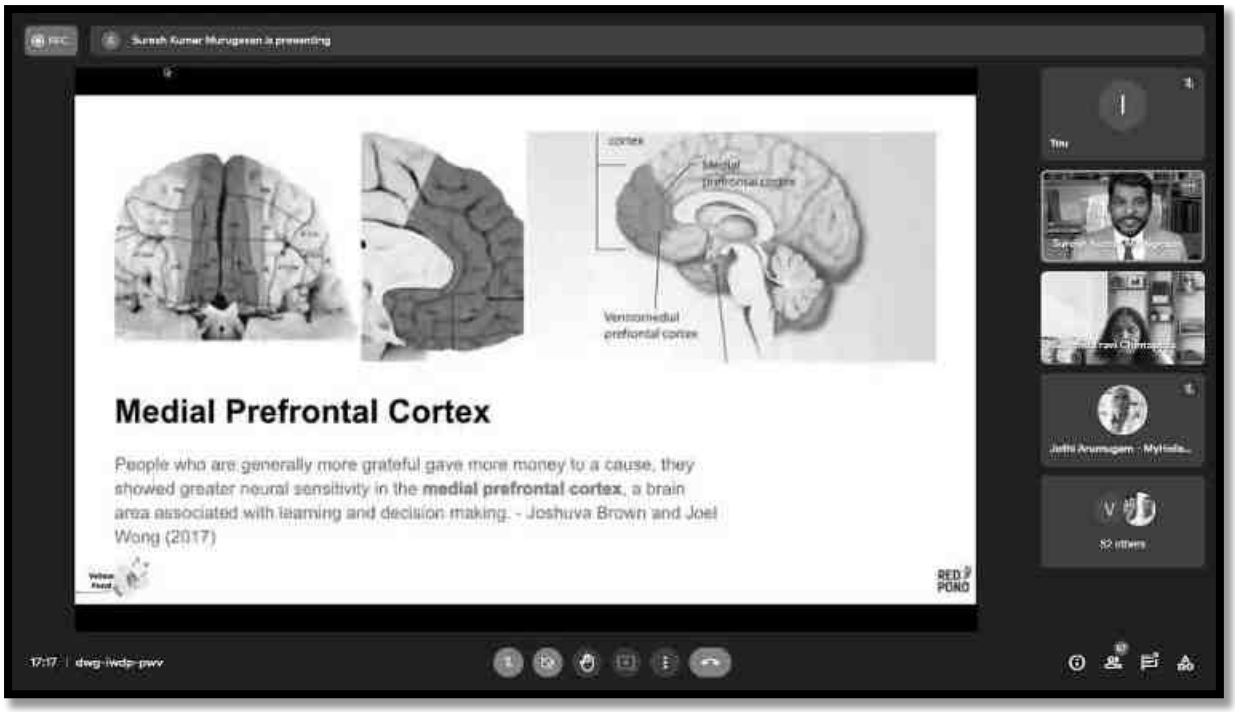
Time: 5 p.m. - 6 p.m.

Topic: Neuroscience of Gratitude

Resource person: Dr.Suresh Kumar Murugesan, Head- PG Dept of Psychology, American College

No of Participants: 37





Everyone wants to live happily ever after. Comfortable work, a perfect family, financial stability, and a great social life! And in this undefined pursuit of happiness which is especially like a mirage, how many times do we have a minute to thank what we already have at this moment?

Gratitude is a mighty human emotion. By transmitting and receiving simple messages of thanks, we can truly enjoy the pleasure we seek elsewhere. Gratitude, derived from the Latin word 'gratis', means gratitude or thankfulness.

In the simplest form, gratitude refers to a "state of recognition" or "state of recognition".

Our webinar today on "Neuroscience in Gratitude" by Dr. Suresh Kumar gave us a clear picture about how our neurological system is responsible for our gratitude activity, he explicated the Neuroscientific Research into Gratitude, How Gratitude Affects the Brain, The Relationship Between Resilience and Gratitude, Gratitude and Stress, A Look at Depression and Gratitude, How Does Gratitude Impact Mental Health?. Thanks to Dr.Suresh for his wonderful presentation.

Workshop on "Indian Constitution"

Time: 2 p.m. to 3.30 p.m.

Topic: Indian Constitution

Resource person: Mr.Ariaravelan, Managing Committee member, Ilakku

No of Participants: 26

The workshop "The Introduction about Constitution of India" was held in Ilakku on 19 December 2021. This workshop was moderated by Mr. Ariaravelan, a member of the Management Committee, Ilakku. The workshop began with a brainstorming game and he explained the constitution of India to explain the three-level system of Panchayat Raj. The Panchayat Raj system as set out by the 73rd Amending Act has a three-tier structure: 1. Gram Panchayat at the village level 2. Panchayat Samiti at block level 3. Zila Parichad at the district level. He also explained the roles and responsibilities of all three levels of government, the legislative assembly, Parliament, and the judiciary. We intend to hold a second workshop to explain the profound details of India's constitution. The students greatly appreciated the session and said that they had a clear vision of the governmental structure.

Special Activities

Christmas celebration at Rajaji old age home

We

celebrated Christmas at Rajaji old age home on 25th December 2021 with Senior citizens. The celebration was started with small introduction by Ms. Vijayalakshmi. Then Senior citizens cut the Christmas cake and that was shared by all. Students performed cultural programs with senior citizens. Students thank the members of old age home for allowing them for volunteer program. Everyone got blesses from senior citizen at the End. It was a remarkable experience for us all.

Students like the centre

Now we have 75 students at Ilakku which included 50 scholarships and 25 non-scholarship students. Students really enjoy the centre, they take ownership in the center and water the plants often, and clean the campus for maintaining the cleanliness of the building. We felt very happy about they felt it was their second home.

Students' Manual preparation

We have two types of folders for all the students of Ilakku. They are students' personal folder file and Student assignment file. Scholarship students' personal folder contains the following information that included 1. Entrance interview form 2. I am a leader academy survey form 3. Scholarship application 4. Scholarship Rules and Regulations 5. Permission form 6. Other details: Income certificate, community certificate, Aadhar card, Mark statements, Vaccination certificate. Non-scholarship students' personal folder contains the following information that included 1. Entrance interview form 2. Permission form 3. Other details: Income certificate, community certificate, Aadhar card, Mark statements, Vaccination certificate.

The student assignment file contains the workshop assignments which were assigned to students after each workshop. The objective of creating assignment is as follows: 1. To identify what they learned in each workshop 2. To increase their writing skills 3. To enhance their creativity in the presentation of an assignment 4. To recollect the information whenever they want to collect information on any workshop topic. Student assignments were periodically evaluated.

B. R. Ambedkar (Chairman of the Drafting Committee) B. N. Rau (Constitutional Advisor to the Constituent Assembly) Surendra Nath Mukherjee (Chief Draftsman of the Constituent Assembly) and other members of Constituent Assembly. The original text of the Constitution contained 395 articles in 22 parts and eight schedules. It came into effect on January 26, 1950, the day that India celebrates each year as the Republic Day. The number of articles has since increased to 448 due to 100 amendments. The Commonwealth of India Bill, drafted by Annie Beasant in 1925, specifically included demands for seven fundamental rights – individual liberty, freedom of conscience, free expression of opinion, freedom of assembly, and non-discrimination on the ground of sex, free elementary education and free use of public spaces. Indian Constitution is a mixed bag of borrowings. On November 26, 1949, the Constitution was adopted. It came into force on January 26, 1950. It was on this day that the members of the Constituent Assembly signed the documents. Many countries have been an inspiration for the framing of the Constitution of India. Take a look at such countries below and the parts that have been borrowed from them. Indian Constitution Day is observed on November 26 every year.

Time: 11a.m. to 1.00 p.m.

Topic: Preamble and Life Experiences

Resource person: Mr.Murali, TNPSC course trainer

Participants: 35 students

According to the preamble, the constitution of India has been pursuance of the solemn resolution of the people of India to constitute India into a 'Sovereign Democratic Republic', and to secure well-defined objects set forth in the preamble. Sovereignty denotes supreme and ultimate power. Preamble declares India to be a sovereign, socialist, secular and democratic republic. ... The objectives stated by the Preamble are to secure justice, liberty, equality to all citizens and promote fraternity to maintain unity and integrity of the nation. Liberty: Every citizen will have the liberty of thought, expression, belief, faith and worship. Equality: Every citizen will be provided with the equality of status and opportunity. Fraternity: All the citizens of India have been assured about the dignity of individual and the unity and integrity of the nation.

Info Bits related to Preamble of Indian Constitution

- Who was the Calligrapher of the Indian Constitution: Prem Behari Narain Raizada (1901–1966) was the calligrapher who hand-wrote the Constitution of India.
- Who was the chief artist behind the illustration of the original Indian Constitution: Nandalal Bose took up the historic task of beautifying/decorating the original manuscript of the Constitution of India. He was assisted by his disciple Beohar Rammanohar Sinha.
- Who designed and decorated the Preamble page of the Indian Constitution: The preamble page, along with other pages of the original Constitution of India, was designed and decorated solely by renowned painter Beohar Rammanohar Sinha of Jabalpur.
- Supreme Court of India has, in the Kesavananda case, recognised that the preamble may be used to interpret ambiguous areas of the constitution where differing interpretations present themselves. (In the 1995 case of Union Government Vs LIC of India also the Supreme Court has once again held that Preamble is an integral part of the Constitution.

- As originally enacted the preamble described the state as a "sovereign democratic republic". In 1976 the Forty-second Amendment changed this by adding words socialist and secular to read "sovereign socialist secular democratic republic".

Participants: 50 Students.

As you search for the proper Kindergarten for your child, you may encounter the term "play-primarily based totally getting to know" extra instances than you could count. But what does "play-primarily based totally getting to know" imply and why is it critical? To position it simply; kids research thru playing. During the act of play kids are exploring, take risks, interact with their imagination, and remedy problems. They are getting to know treasured talents that aid social, physical, and cognitive development. The Early Years Learning Framework defines play-primarily based totally getting to know as a context for getting to know thru which kids arrange and make feel in their social worlds, as they interact actively with people, objects, and representations. Play-primarily based totally getting to know appeals to kids' herbal interest and their preference to interact in reviews primarily based totally on their very own precise pastimes, as they make feel of the arena around them. In play-primarily based totally getting to know programs, educators tailor their coaching possibilities to align with the form of play the kids are attracted to.

The webinar on "Play-primarily based totally getting to know the procedure for kids" through Ms.Sunantha Ravi, Counselling Psychologist, Manasa Subhkara, Hyderabad gave us orientation approximately 1. Elements of play-primarily based totally getting to know 2.

Benefits of play-primarily based totally getting to know. 3. What to search for in a play-primarily based totally application.

So while dad and mom pick a kinder lawn for his or her kids they need to make certain approximately the subsequent facilities, • Look at whether or not the kinder has each indoor and outside play areas. • Ask if an application includes lengthy durations of uninterrupted play. • Check that the rooms have numerous areas and materials, including a sensory play region or dramatic corner. • Ask the educators how they comprise kids' pastimes into getting to know. • Ask if the kinder gives a possibility for each man or woman and institution play. • Make positive there's a possibility for kids to determine their very own play enjoy every day.

The above is the takeaway from today's session.

Webinar on Involuntary Clients

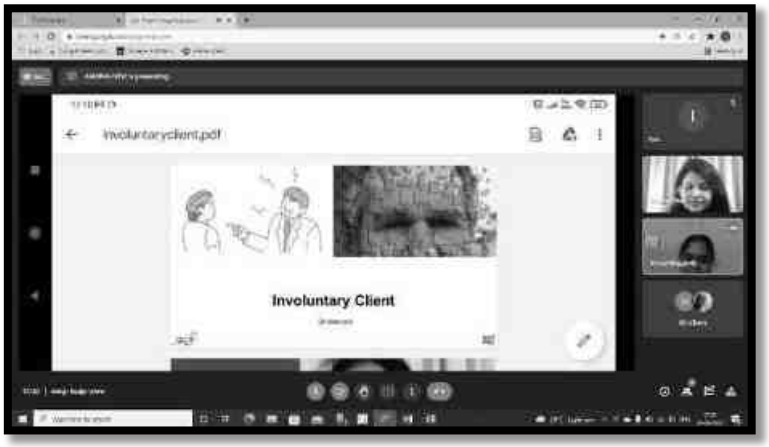
Date: 28.01.2022

Time: 5 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Topic: Involuntary Clients

Resource person: Dr. N.P. Veena Vaani, Consultant Homeopath,
Counselling Psychologist, Chennai

Participants: 52 Students



Many therapy patients are involuntary in the sense that they come at the behest of others. Even people who think they are asking for help on their own may have a part of their psyche that says demandingly or with irritation, "You need therapy." They may think that seeking help in therapy is the thing to do not because they want to change the way they respond to the world but because attendance will get others off their backs for their annoying or self-defeating tendencies. Then there are those who must attend because they have gotten into trouble at work, with the law, or with the child welfare system. Finally, there are therapy trainees whose programs require them to attend.

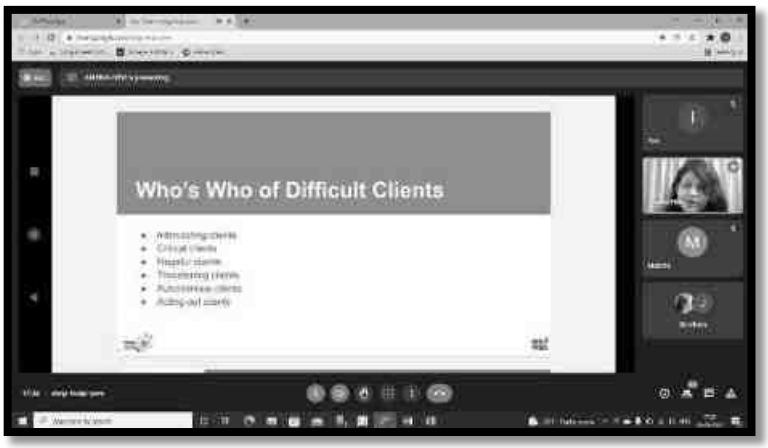
All of these patients have in common their claim that there is nothing really wrong with them. Of course, many successful therapies make patients feel there is nothing really wrong with them, teaching self-love through relational atonement or radical acceptance through self-exposure, but this form of treatment is effective only (or mostly) if it unfolds in the context of a mutual agreement that the atonement and acceptance have a purpose. “You poor baby” works only if both people know that the recipient is not in fact a poor baby. The architecture of a therapy relationship depends on an essential understanding that the patient needs help and the therapist is offering it, even if these essential facts are rarely discussed after the goals are set and the case formulation is agreed upon.

The webinar on “Involuntary Clients” by Dr.N.P.Veena Vani, Consultant Homeopath, Counselling Psychologist, Chennai gave a clear vision about who are called involuntary clients, Types of involuntary clients, the strategies to deal with them, etc. Thanks, Dr. Veena for your input.



Each student of Academy has two folders, one is student folder contains all their information like Entrance form, Academy survey form, Scholarship application, Scholarship rules and regulations and Permission form, it also includes their Income certificate, Community certificate, Aadhar card, Mark statements and Vaccination certificates, another one is manual folder that contains all their assignments.

Webinar on "Adolescents: Communication and Relationships

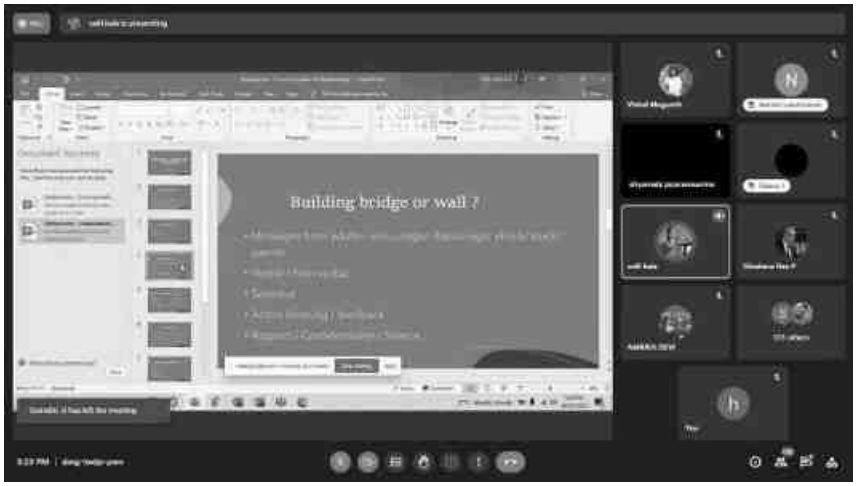
Date: 09.02.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: Adolescents: Communication and Relationships

Resource person: Ms. Vallikala .S, Student Counsellor, Kumara guru college of Technology, Coimbatore

No of Participants: 41 students



Young people's adolescent stage of physical, social, emotional and cognitive growth often influences, or is also associated with, changes in the nature of relationships with their family. Adolescent/parent relationships vary greatly between dependent and independent status, and between harmony and conflict. Adolescent romantic relationships have been linked to short-as well as long-term outcomes, with the developmental significance of these relationships depending on their quality. High-quality adolescent relationships can promote emotional health, support identity development, and foster competencies that benefit adult relationships. Conversely, low-quality relationships can trigger depression, weaken school engagement, and set in motion patterns of relationship instability and conflict that persist into adulthood.

Peer relationships are very influential in adolescence. During this time, when young people are developing autonomy from their parents, peers become a significant source of social and emotional support. The attitudes of adolescents' friends can have both a positive and negative influence.

Our today's webinar on "Adolescents: Communication and Relationships" by Ms. Vallikala Student Counsellor, Kumara guru college of Technology, Coimbatore explicated the importance of dealing with adolescent children without hurting their feelings, Self Esteem and Confidence. Our today's take away is Parents need to approach their children, who have been dealing with teenage growth issues, carefully and in a friendly manner to discuss the concern(s).

Webinar on "Neuroscience of happiness"

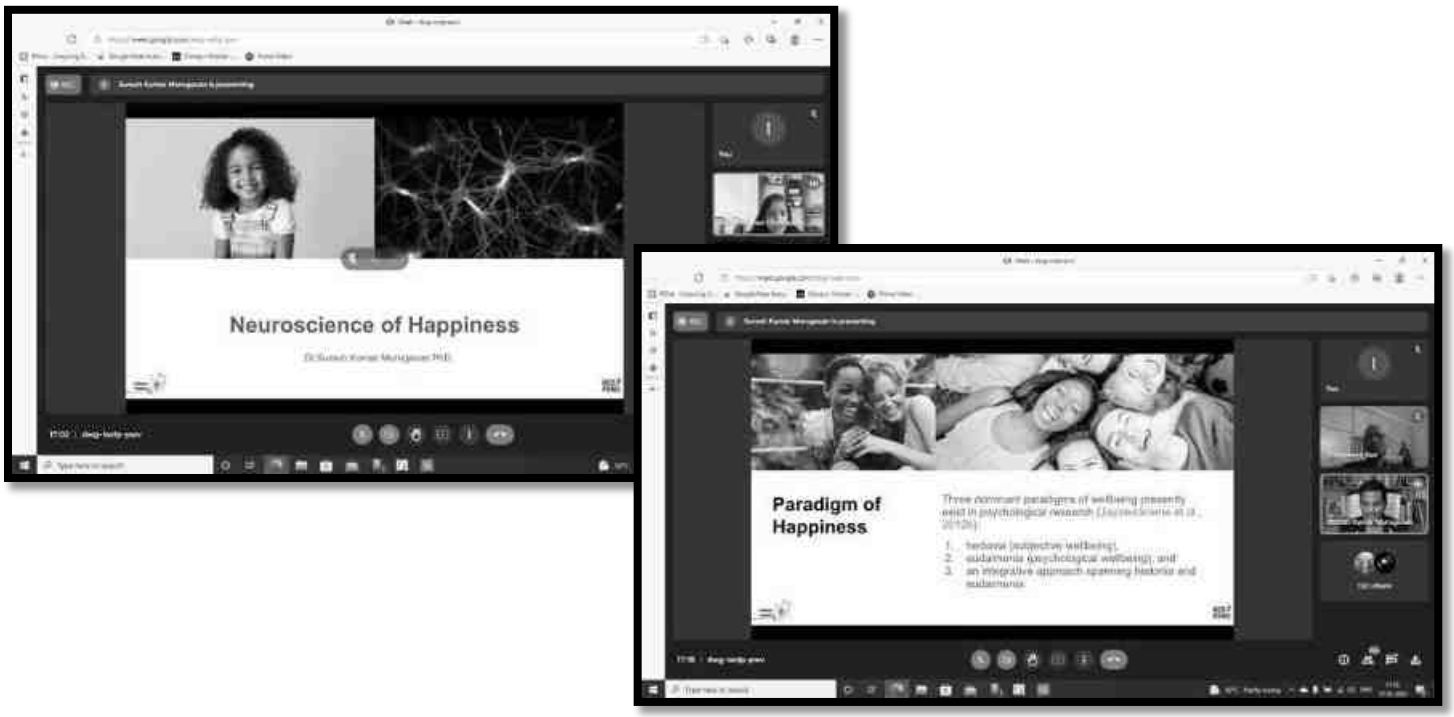
Date: 10.02.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: Neuroscience of Happiness

Resource person: Dr. Suresh Kumar Murugesan, HOD & Asst Prof ,Dept of Psychology , The American college , Madurai

No of Participants: 41 students



The ancient Greeks were among the first to explore the link between the physical body and our emotional responses. They created the concept of the four humors -- yellow bile, black bile, blood and phlegm -- to explain the differences in personalities among humans [source: Wilson]. All four humors are present in each person; too much or too little of one created an imbalance that formed the notable personality traits in an individual. Although the effects of phlegm and bile as humors have long since been dismissed as theories, after 2,400 years, the link between the physical and the emotional has come into focus once more. In the 21st century, the field of neuroscience proposes that happiness -- like every other emotional experience -- is the result of electrochemical reactions in the brain brought on by stimuli. This revelation is part of the neuroscience revolution, the fifth revolution in the understanding of humanity and our nature, with Copernicus, Darwin, Freud and the discovery of DNA providing the foundations for the first four]. This fifth revolution is based on Francis Crick's "astonishing hypothesis," that "'you,' your joys and sorrows, your memories and your ambitions, your sense of personal identity and free will, are in fact no more than the behaviour of a vast assembly of nerve cells and their associated neurons. The webinar on " Neuroscience of Happiness" by Dr. Suresh Kumar Murugesan, HOD & Asst Prof ,Dept of Psychology ,The American college ,Madurai gave us clear vision about how neurons plays vital role in our psychological emotions.

Webinar on "Criticisms: Is it bad?

Date: 19.02.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: Criticisms: Is it bad?

Resource person: Ms. Sweetie Jain, Psychologist & Counsellor, Mumbai

No of Participants: 44 students

Dealing with criticism positively is an important life skill. At some point in your life you will be criticised, perhaps in a professional way. Sometimes it will be difficult to accept – but that all depends on your reaction.

You can either use criticism in a positive way to improve, or in a negative way that can lower your self-esteem and cause stress, anger or even aggression. When challenged by another person, it is common to react in a negative manner. Consider how negative reactions make you look – and more importantly how they make you feel. The way in which you choose to handle criticism has a knock-on effect in various aspects of your life, therefore it is better to identify ways in which you can benefit from criticism and use it to your advantage to be a stronger and more able person. Some individuals are critical by nature and do not always realise that they are hurting the feelings of another person.

If you know a person who is critical of everything try not to take their comments too seriously, as this is just part of their character trait. If you do take negative comments to heart it can create resentment and anger towards the other person, which could damage the relationship. The key thing to remember is that whatever the circumstance is, don´t respond in anger as this will cause a scene and create bad feelings – and possibly a bad image of you.

Today's webinar on "Criticism – is it bad? by Ms.Sweety Jain, Psychologist & Counsellor, Mumbai gave us clear vision about how to handle criticism, Types of Criticism, How to make criticism in a yummy way through create our own platter. Our today's take away is We all learn by making mistakes, and learning how to deal with criticism positively is one way that we can improve our interpersonal relationships with others.

Webinar on “Shape your thoughts, Shape your future

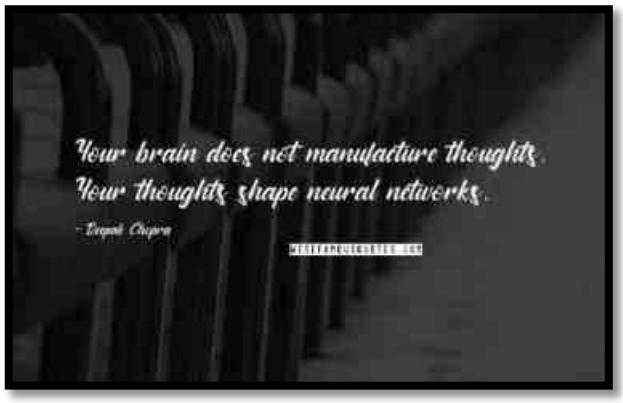
Date: 20.02.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: Shape your thoughts, Shape your future

Resource person: Dr.D. Sasi Devi PhD; Asst professor, Dept of English, Thiyagarajar College, Madurai, Tamilnadu

No of Participants: 44 students



When we change our thoughts, behaviours, and beliefs, we can change our biology. We are the masters of our lives not the victim of our genes. "When we take the time to set a positive personal intention, we are aligning ourselves with what we want to bring into our lives. We are affirming our commitment to that principle. When we return to it over the hours, days, weeks, and even months, it begins to take shape in our lives. Our lives begin to form around our intentions and we begin to notice how intention finds its way into action. We start to see our lives change shape before our very eyes. What we think, we become.

The greatest form of knowledge is knowing yourself. Knowing yourself starts with knowing your thoughts. Your mind-set is nothing more than a compilation of your thoughts. Your thoughts have incredible power to shape your life and the lives of others, because your thoughts and interpretations of circumstances directly influence your beliefs, and ultimately, your actions.

Our today’s webinar on “Shape your thoughts, Shape your future” by Dr.D. Sasi Devi PhD, Asst professor, Dept of English, Thiyagarajar College, Madurai, Tamilnadu gave us clear vision about how can we shape our mind, how can we transform our thoughts, how control our inner thoughts, how we purify our thoughts, how shut our mind off to stop thinking about anything, how we stop our imaginary thoughts. She gave a three minutes meditation practice in the end of the session.

Webinar on "Mental health in the Post COVID19 challenges and way forward"

Date: 23.02.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: Mental health in the Post COVID19 challenges and way forward

Resource person: Dr.C.JeyaKumar, Associate Professor, NIMHANS, Bangalore

No of Participants: 38 students

The COVID-19 pandemic has posed a serious threat to global mental health. Multiple lines of evidence suggest that there is a varying yet considerable increase in mental health issues among the general population and vulnerable groups. The aftermath is obscure and speculative from a social, economic, individual and public mental health perspective. Recently published studies support the existence of an emotional epidemic curve, describing a high probability of an increase in the burden of mental health issues in the post pandemic era. Furthermore, previous major public health emergencies showed that more than half of the population developed mental health problems and required mental health intervention. There is, therefore, an urgent need to reorganise existing mental health services to address the current unmet needs for mental health and to prepare for future challenges in the post pandemic era in terms of prevention and management.

Bereavement, isolation, loss of income and fear are triggering mental health conditions or exacerbating existing ones. Many people may be facing increased levels of alcohol and drug use, insomnia, and anxiety.

Meanwhile, COVID-19 itself can lead to neurological and mental complications, such as delirium, agitation, and stroke. People with pre-existing mental, neurological or substance use disorders are also more vulnerable to SARS-CoV-2 infection−they may stand a higher risk of severe outcomes and even death.

Today's webinar on "Mental health in the Post COVID19 challenges and way forward" by Dr.C.JeyaKumar, Associate Professor, NIMHANS,Bangalore gave us clear orientation about the challenges we are facing in the post Covid-19 and the way to overcome those challenges.

Online Webinar on "Neuroscience of Compassion"

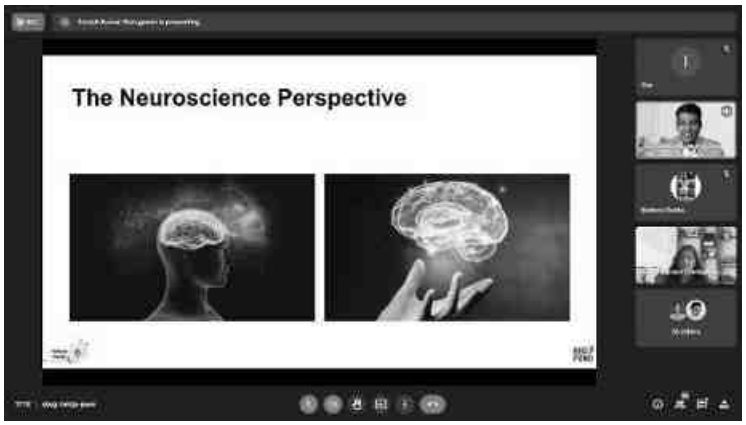
Date : 26.11.2021

Time : 5 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Topic : Neuroscience of Compassion

Resource person : Dr.Suresh Kumar Murugesan, Head -PG Dept of Psychology, The American College, Madurai

No.Of. Participants : 25



More recently neuroscientists have described a third system, the "tend and befriend" system. This system is modulated by the neurotransmitter oxytocin. ... This system is correlated with several human feelings, one of which is compassion. Compassion refers to feeling empathy in the face of suffering. Scientists define compassion as a sensitivity to the suffering of another, coupled with a desire to alleviate their suffering. This makes compassion a separate entity from its cousin, empathy, which is a general shared experience of another person's emotional state, be it anger, sadness, joy or suffering. Empathy usually does not involve a motivational or a "prosocial" component – wanting to help another person is a purely compassionate response.

Compassion is also distinct from empathy in that the feelings generated by compassion could be totally different from those observed in the suffering person. I could feel anger at the injustice meted upon certain members of society, for instance.

Our online webinar on “Neuroscience of Compassion” facilitated by Dr. Suresh, HOD, Psychology department, American College gave us clear vision about what is compassion, the brain area which will responsible for being Compassionate, the difference between Pity, Sympathy, Empathy and Compassion. Thanks to Dr.Suresh.

November month topic-Volunteerism

Workshop on Volunteerism

Date: 21.11.2021

Time: 2.00 p.m. to 4.30 p.m.

Topic: Volunteerism

Resource person: Mr.Ariaravelan, Managing trustee, Ilakku

No.Of Participants: 32 students

Volunteerism is the practice of providing time and skills for the benefit of other people and causes rather than for financial benefit. In an employment-related context, volunteerism is concerned with the methods and tools employers use to support employees that want to volunteer. Volunteerism is a form of helping in which people actively seek out opportunities to assist others in need, make considerable and continuing commitments to provide assistance, and sustain these commitments over extended periods of time, often at considerable personal cost. Several features mark it as a distinctive form of helping.

Unlike the helping that occurs spontaneously in response to emergencies, volunteers typically seek out opportunities to help. Unlike the obligated helping that occurs in the context of ongoing relationships, volunteers typically do not know those they help in advance and have no prior bonds of obligation to help them. To understand the psychology of volunteerism, researchers have identified diverse personal and social motivations served by volunteering, have developed inventories to assess these motivations, and explored their role in the processes by which people initiate and sustain their involvement in voluntary helping. Theoretically, the study of volunteerism is informative about forms of helping that are planful, sustained, and that occur in the absence of bonds of obligation. Practically, it can inform the practice of volunteerism, specifically the ways that organizations can enhance the recruitment, placement, and retention of volunteers.

Workshop on Volunteerism was conducted at Ilakku on 21st November 2021. The workshop was facilitated by Mr.Ariaravelan, Managing committee member, Ilakku. He explained the content based on 5Ws and one H. Before the workshop, he conducted a brain storming game with students that increased their strength and energy and made them to become more attentive in workshop.

Volunteerism in Community

We visited nearby community and distributed Diwali sweets which were sponsored by Nithila Nursing home. Community People felt very happy and keenly asked about our organisation activities. They told if any deprived girl need help for her education, sure they would approach us. Even it was not an advertisement program, people were very much impressed by our way of approach. Thanks to Nithila nursing home for their wonderful support.

Volunteerism in Old age home

We visited Rajaji old age home on 27th November 2021 for volunteer program. When we visited there old age people were invited us and asked us why we had not visited them for a long time. We said due to corona it was not advised to visit them and made them in trouble, and we promised them we are going to visit them often. Then students introduced themselves to old people, they also gave brief introduction about them. They interacted for some time and the in charge Ms.Maheswari gave introduction about Rajaji old age home and its history. Students offered snacks to old age people and also danced with them for different songs. Then we played memory game with senior citizen. It was such a memorable experience for us.

Online Webinar on 'Koshas: The Layers of Yourself"

Date: 08.12.2021

Time: 5 p.m.-6 p.m.

Topic: "Koshas: The Layers of Your Self"

Resource person: Mr. Jothi Arumugam, Ashtanga Yoga Therapist & Psychotherapist, My holism Yoga and Mental Health Academy, Chennai

No of Participants: 14

In Eastern philosophy, the koshas are considered the energetic layers of your body that surround your soul. Sometimes, they're referred to as "sheaths" or "casings. "The five koshas exist together and are encased, or nested, within each other. Your physical body composes the outermost layer, while the innermost layer contains your blissful body or soul. They were first described in the ancient yoga text the Taittiriya Upanishad. This Vedic text is thought to have been written during the sixth century B.C. and provides guidelines relating to spiritual liberation. Some believe the koshas are key to enhancing awareness of your inner world and developing a connection among your mind, body, and spirit. Attention to your koshas may awaken deeper states of awareness on your path to self-realization.

The Webinar on "Koshas- The layers of yourself" facilitated by Mr. Jothi Arumugam, Ashtanga Yoga Therapist & Psychotherapist, My holism Yoga, and Mental health Academy, Chennai gave us a clear vision about the philosophy and history of Koshas, Koshas Vs Chakras, how they relate to yoga and how we can use that for good health. Our takeaway message today, Deep breathing, yoga, and meditation may boost our vibrational energy. Interacting with nature, eating a good diet, developing healthy relationships, and practicing gratitude and generosity can also help.

Online Webinar on "Yoga Exercises for the Eyes"

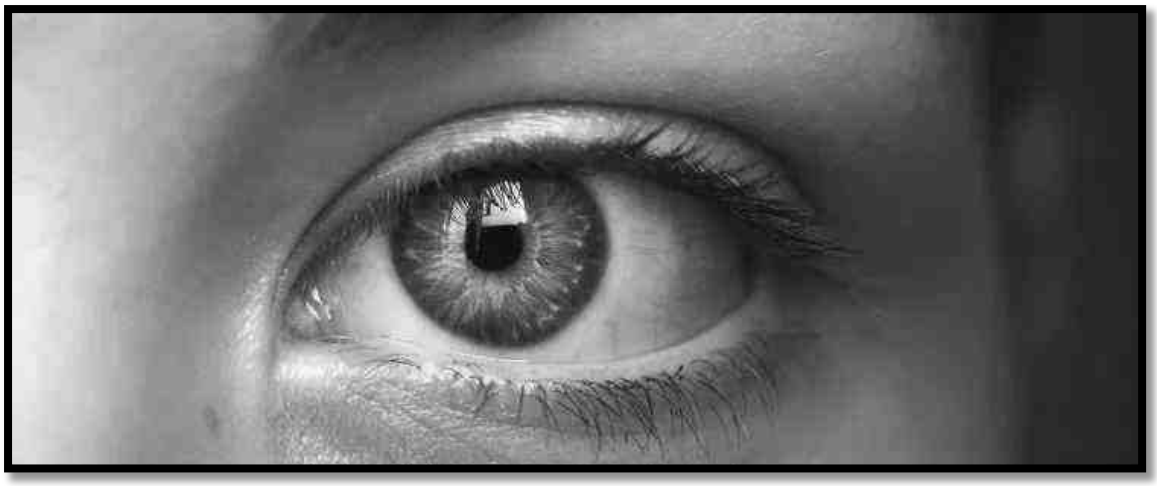
Date: 17.12.2021

Time: 5 p.m. - 6 p.m.

Topic: Yoga Exercises for the Eyes

Resource person: Mr. Ramesh, Yoga Practitioner, Chennai, Tamilnadu

No of Participants: 35



Worldwide, the number of people of all ages visually impaired is estimated to be about 285 million, the majority of them attributed to uncorrected refractive errors (43 percent) and cataracts (33 percent). A report published by the American Academy of Ophthalmology predicted that about 49.8 percent of the world's population would have myopia by the year 2050.

With such alarming statistics, one cannot afford to rule out significant care for one's vision as part of the daily regime. Even 10-15 minutes every day of eye yoga exercises will keep your eyes healthy and devoid of any complications.

These yoga eye exercises to improve eyesight will benefit you ranging from better vision to increased concentration and spiritual insight. Yoga for eyes will help protect your vision from the stresses of light, tension, and other environmental conditions - keeping them refreshed and bright.

The webinar on "Yoga exercises for Eyes" by Mr. Ramesh, Yoga trainer, Chennai gave a clear vision about the reasons for eyesight problems, how to avoid them, the best yoga practices for Eyes, etc. In the session itself, he made us practice the yoga exercises for the bright vision of the eyes, it was a participatory session.

Online Webinar on "Neuroscience of Gratitude"

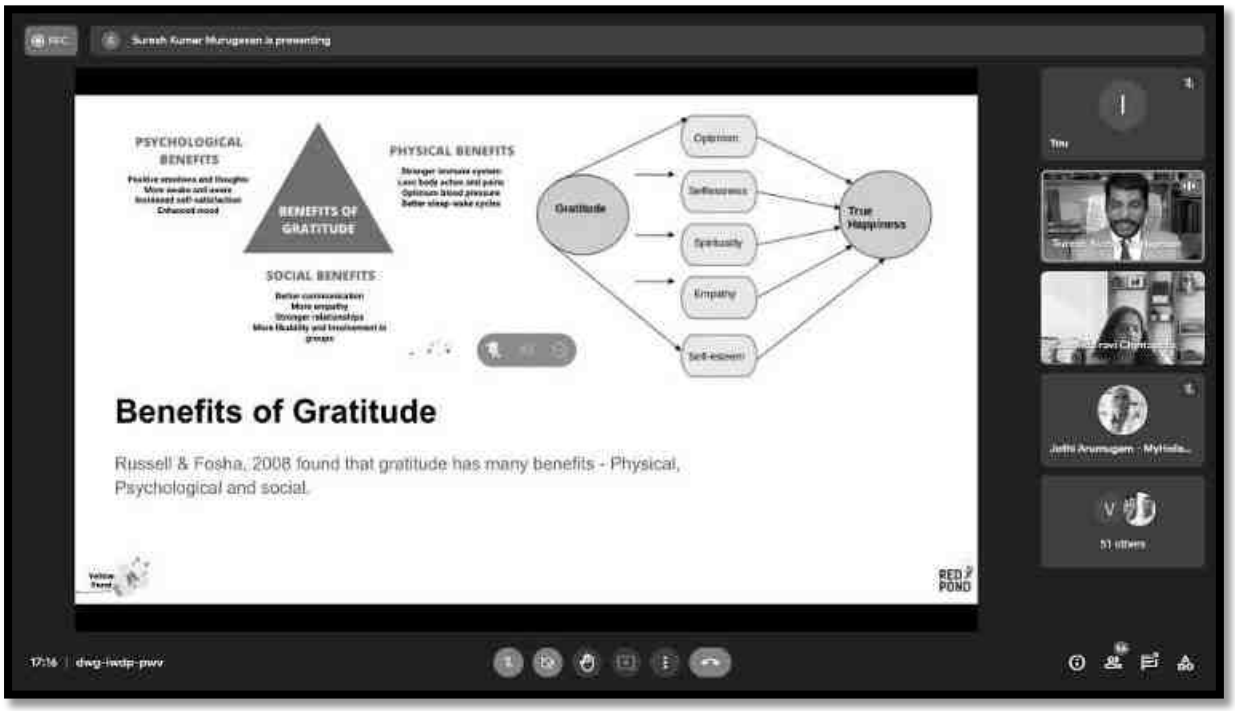
Date: 24.12.2021

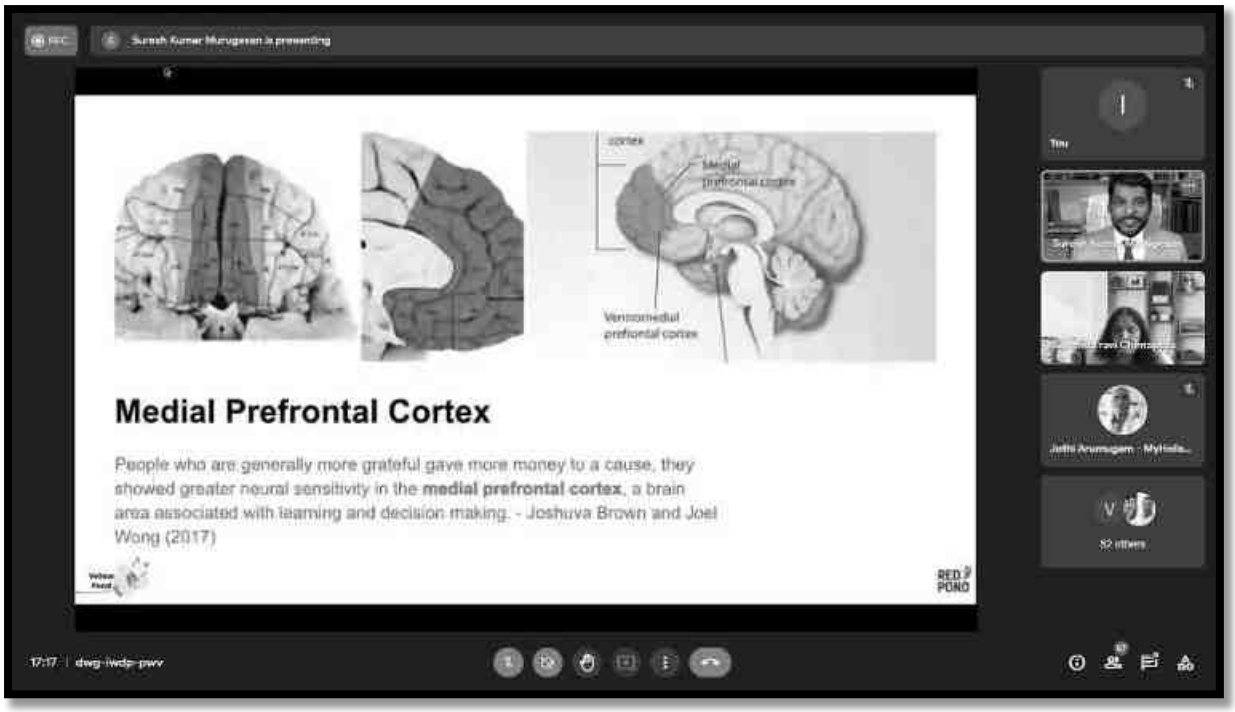
Time: 5 p.m. - 6 p.m.

Topic: Neuroscience of Gratitude

Resource person: Dr.Suresh Kumar Murugesan, Head- PG Dept of Psychology, American College

No of Participants: 37





Everyone wants to live happily ever after. Comfortable work, a perfect family, financial stability, and a great social life! And in this undefined pursuit of happiness which is especially like a mirage, how many times do we have a minute to thank what we already have at this moment?

Gratitude is a mighty human emotion. By transmitting and receiving simple messages of thanks, we can truly enjoy the pleasure we seek elsewhere. Gratitude, derived from the Latin word 'gratis', means gratitude or thankfulness.

In the simplest form, gratitude refers to a "state of recognition" or "state of recognition".

Our webinar today on "Neuroscience in Gratitude" by Dr. Suresh Kumar gave us a clear picture about how our neurological system is responsible for our gratitude activity, he explicated the Neuroscientific Research into Gratitude, How Gratitude Affects the Brain, The Relationship Between Resilience and Gratitude, Gratitude and Stress, A Look at Depression and Gratitude, How Does Gratitude Impact Mental Health?. Thanks to Dr.Suresh for his wonderful presentation.

Workshop on "Indian Constitution"

Time: 2 p.m. to 3.30 p.m.

Topic: Indian Constitution

Resource person: Mr.Ariaravelan, Managing Committee member, Ilakku

No of Participants: 26

The workshop "The Introduction about Constitution of India" was held in Ilakku on 19 December 2021. This workshop was moderated by Mr. Ariaravelan, a member of the Management Committee, Ilakku. The workshop began with a brainstorming game and he explained the constitution of India to explain the three-level system of Panchayat Raj. The Panchayat Raj system as set out by the 73rd Amending Act has a three-tier structure: 1. Gram Panchayat at the village level 2. Panchayat Samiti at block level 3. Zila Parichad at the district level. He also explained the roles and responsibilities of all three levels of government, the legislative assembly, Parliament, and the judiciary. We intend to hold a second workshop to explain the profound details of India's constitution. The students greatly appreciated the session and said that they had a clear vision of the governmental structure.

Special Activities

Christmas celebration at Rajaji old age home

We

celebrated Christmas at Rajaji old age home on 25th December 2021 with Senior citizens. The celebration was started with small introduction by Ms. Vijayalakshmi. Then Senior citizens cut the Christmas cake and that was shared by all. Students performed cultural programs with senior citizens. Students thank the members of old age home for allowing them for volunteer program. Everyone got blesses from senior citizen at the End. It was a remarkable experience for us all.

Students like the centre

Now we have 75 students at Ilakku which included 50 scholarships and 25 non-scholarship students. Students really enjoy the centre, they take ownership in the center and water the plants often, and clean the campus for maintaining the cleanliness of the building. We felt very happy about they felt it was their second home.

Students' Manual preparation

We have two types of folders for all the students of Ilakku. They are students' personal folder file and Student assignment file. Scholarship students' personal folder contains the following information that included 1. Entrance interview form 2. I am a leader academy survey form 3. Scholarship application 4. Scholarship Rules and Regulations 5. Permission form 6. Other details: Income certificate, community certificate, Aadhar card, Mark statements, Vaccination certificate. Non-scholarship students' personal folder contains the following information that included 1. Entrance interview form 2. Permission form 3. Other details: Income certificate, community certificate, Aadhar card, Mark statements, Vaccination certificate.

The student assignment file contains the workshop assignments which were assigned to students after each workshop. The objective of creating assignment is as follows: 1. To identify what they learned in each workshop 2. To increase their writing skills 3. To enhance their creativity in the presentation of an assignment 4. To recollect the information whenever they want to collect information on any workshop topic. Student assignments were periodically evaluated.

Date: 08.01.22

Time: 11a.m. to 1 p.m.

Topic: Indian Constitution

Resource person: Mr.Murali, TNPSC course trainer

Participants: 35 students

B. R. Ambedkar (Chairman of the Drafting Committee) B. N. Rau (Constitutional Advisor to the Constituent Assembly) Surendra Nath Mukherjee (Chief Draftsman of the Constituent Assembly) and other members of Constituent Assembly. The original text of the Constitution contained 395 articles in 22 parts and eight schedules. It came into effect on January 26, 1950, the day that India celebrates each year as the Republic Day. The number of articles has since increased to 448 due to 100 amendments. The Commonwealth of India Bill, drafted by Annie Beasant in 1925, specifically included demands for seven fundamental rights – individual liberty, freedom of conscience, free expression of opinion, freedom of assembly, and non-discrimination on the ground of sex, free elementary education and free use of public spaces. Indian Constitution is a mixed bag of borrowings. On November 26, 1949, the Constitution was adopted. It came into force on January 26, 1950. It was on this day that the members of the Constituent Assembly signed the documents. Many countries have been an inspiration for the framing of the Constitution of India. Take a look at such countries below and the parts that have been borrowed from them. Indian Constitution Day is observed on November 26 every year.

Webinar on Involuntary Clients

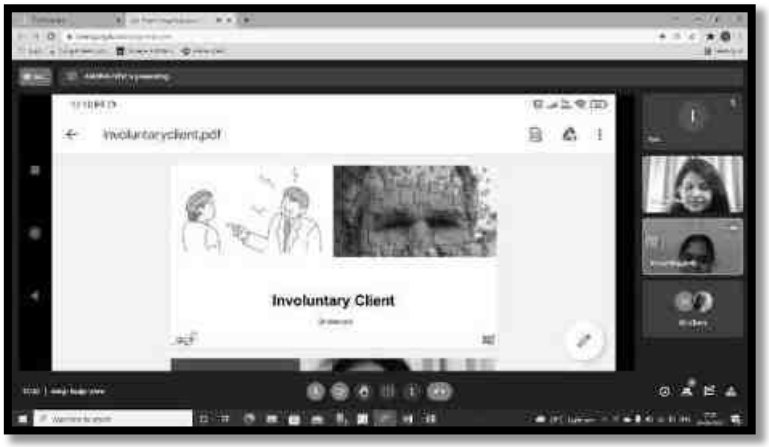
Date: 28.01.2022

Time: 5 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Topic: Involuntary Clients

Resource person: Dr. N.P. Veena Vaani, Consultant Homeopath,
Counselling Psychologist, Chennai

Participants: 52 Students



Many therapy patients are involuntary in the sense that they come at the behest of others. Even people who think they are asking for help on their own may have a part of their psyche that says demandingly or with irritation, "You need therapy." They may think that seeking help in therapy is the thing to do not because they want to change the way they respond to the world but because attendance will get others off their backs for their annoying or self-defeating tendencies. Then there are those who must attend because they have gotten into trouble at work, with the law, or with the child welfare system. Finally, there are therapy trainees whose programs require them to attend.

All of these patients have in common their claim that there is nothing really wrong with them. Of course, many successful therapies make patients feel there is nothing really wrong with them, teaching self-love through relational atonement or radical acceptance through self-exposure, but this form of treatment is effective only (or mostly) if it unfolds in the context of a mutual agreement that the atonement and acceptance have a purpose. “You poor baby” works only if both people know that the recipient is not in fact a poor baby. The architecture of a therapy relationship depends on an essential understanding that the patient needs help and the therapist is offering it, even if these essential facts are rarely discussed after the goals are set and the case formulation is agreed upon.

The webinar on “Involuntary Clients” by Dr.N.P.Veena Vani, Consultant Homeopath, Counselling Psychologist, Chennai gave a clear vision about who are called involuntary clients, Types of involuntary clients, the strategies to deal with them, etc. Thanks, Dr. Veena for your input.

Webinar on "Adolescents: Communication and Relationships

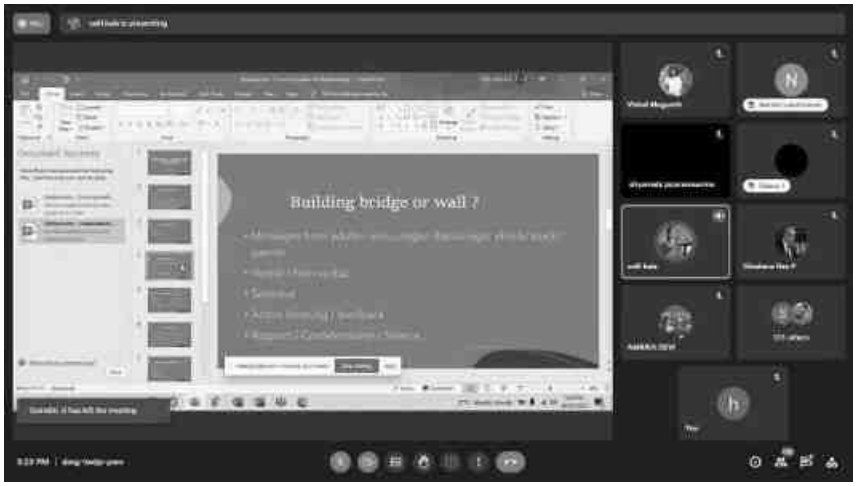
Date: 09.02.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: Adolescents: Communication and Relationships

Resource person: Ms. Vallikala .S, Student Counsellor, Kumara guru college of Technology, Coimbatore

No of Participants: 41 students



Young people's adolescent stage of physical, social, emotional and cognitive growth often influences, or is also associated with, changes in the nature of relationships with their family. Adolescent/parent relationships vary greatly between dependent and independent status, and between harmony and conflict. Adolescent romantic relationships have been linked to short-as well as long-term outcomes, with the developmental significance of these relationships depending on their quality. High-quality adolescent relationships can promote emotional health, support identity development, and foster competencies that benefit adult relationships. Conversely, low-quality relationships can trigger depression, weaken school engagement, and set in motion patterns of relationship instability and conflict that persist into adulthood.

Peer relationships are very influential in adolescence. During this time, when young people are developing autonomy from their parents, peers become a significant source of social and emotional support. The attitudes of adolescents' friends can have both a positive and negative influence.

Our today's webinar on "Adolescents: Communication and Relationships" by Ms. Vallikala Student Counsellor, Kumara guru college of Technology, Coimbatore explicated the importance of dealing with adolescent children without hurting their feelings, Self Esteem and Confidence. Our today's take away is Parents need to approach their children, who have been dealing with teenage growth issues, carefully and in a friendly manner to discuss the concern(s).

Webinar on "Neuroscience of happiness"

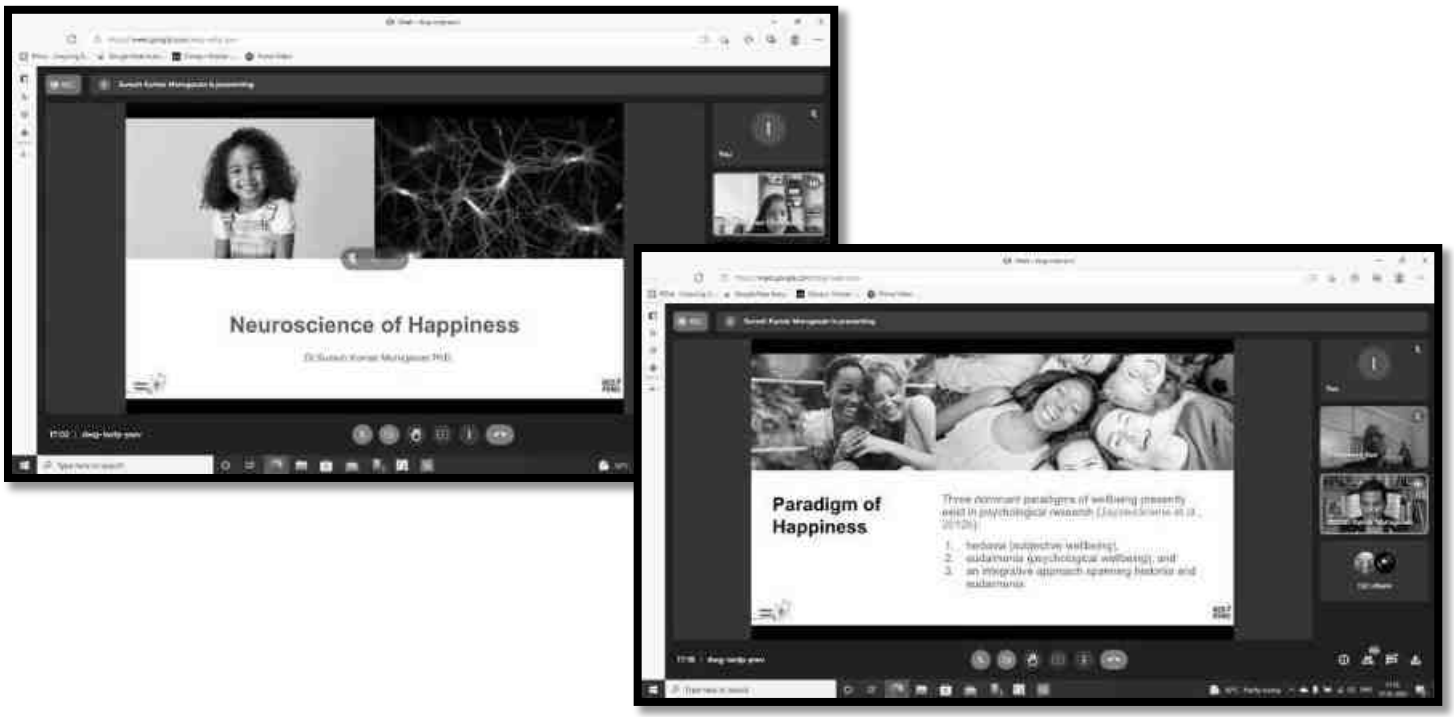
Date: 10.02.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: Neuroscience of Happiness

Resource person: Dr. Suresh Kumar Murugesan, HOD & Asst Prof ,Dept of Psychology , The American college , Madurai

No of Participants: 41 students



The ancient Greeks were among the first to explore the link between the physical body and our emotional responses. They created the concept of the four humors -- yellow bile, black bile, blood and phlegm -- to explain the differences in personalities among humans [source: Wilson]. All four humors are present in each person; too much or too little of one created an imbalance that formed the notable personality traits in an individual. Although the effects of phlegm and bile as humors have long since been dismissed as theories, after 2,400 years, the link between the physical and the emotional has come into focus once more. In the 21st century, the field of neuroscience proposes that happiness -- like every other emotional experience -- is the result of electrochemical reactions in the brain brought on by stimuli. This revelation is part of the neuroscience revolution, the fifth revolution in the understanding of humanity and our nature, with Copernicus, Darwin, Freud and the discovery of DNA providing the foundations for the first four]. This fifth revolution is based on Francis Crick's "astonishing hypothesis," that "'you,' your joys and sorrows, your memories and your ambitions, your sense of personal identity and free will, are in fact no more than the behaviour of a vast assembly of nerve cells and their associated neurons. The webinar on " Neuroscience of Happiness" by Dr. Suresh Kumar Murugesan, HOD & Asst Prof ,Dept of Psychology ,The American college ,Madurai gave us clear vision about how neurons plays vital role in our psychological emotions.

Webinar on "Criticisms: Is it bad?

Date: 19.02.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: Criticisms: Is it bad?

Resource person: Ms. Sweetie Jain, Psychologist & Counsellor, Mumbai

No of Participants: 44 students

Dealing with criticism positively is an important life skill. At some point in your life you will be criticised, perhaps in a professional way. Sometimes it will be difficult to accept – but that all depends on your reaction.

You can either use criticism in a positive way to improve, or in a negative way that can lower your self-esteem and cause stress, anger or even aggression. When challenged by another person, it is common to react in a negative manner. Consider how negative reactions make you look – and more importantly how they make you feel. The way in which you choose to handle criticism has a knock-on effect in various aspects of your life, therefore it is better to identify ways in which you can benefit from criticism and use it to your advantage to be a stronger and more able person. Some individuals are critical by nature and do not always realise that they are hurting the feelings of another person.

If you know a person who is critical of everything try not to take their comments too seriously, as this is just part of their character trait. If you do take negative comments to heart it can create resentment and anger towards the other person, which could damage the relationship. The key thing to remember is that whatever the circumstance is, don´t respond in anger as this will cause a scene and create bad feelings – and possibly a bad image of you.

Today's webinar on "Criticism – is it bad? by Ms.Sweety Jain, Psychologist & Counsellor, Mumbai gave us clear vision about how to handle criticism, Types of Criticism, How to make criticism in a yummy way through create our own platter. Our today's take away is We all learn by making mistakes, and learning how to deal with criticism positively is one way that we can improve our interpersonal relationships with others.

Webinar on “Shape your thoughts, Shape your future

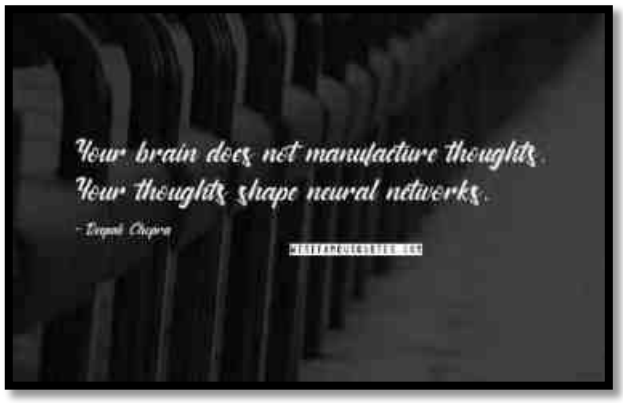
Date: 20.02.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: Shape your thoughts, Shape your future

Resource person: Dr.D. Sasi Devi PhD; Asst professor, Dept of English, Thiyagarajar College, Madurai, Tamilnadu

No of Participants: 44 students



When we change our thoughts, behaviours, and beliefs, we can change our biology. We are the masters of our lives not the victim of our genes. "When we take the time to set a positive personal intention, we are aligning ourselves with what we want to bring into our lives. We are affirming our commitment to that principle. When we return to it over the hours, days, weeks, and even months, it begins to take shape in our lives. Our lives begin to form around our intentions and we begin to notice how intention finds its way into action. We start to see our lives change shape before our very eyes. What we think, we become.

The greatest form of knowledge is knowing yourself. Knowing yourself starts with knowing your thoughts. Your mind-set is nothing more than a compilation of your thoughts. Your thoughts have incredible power to shape your life and the lives of others, because your thoughts and interpretations of circumstances directly influence your beliefs, and ultimately, your actions.

Our today’s webinar on “Shape your thoughts, Shape your future” by Dr.D. Sasi Devi PhD, Asst professor, Dept of English, Thiyagarajar College, Madurai, Tamilnadu gave us clear vision about how can we shape our mind, how can we transform our thoughts, how control our inner thoughts, how we purify our thoughts, how shut our mind off to stop thinking about anything, how we stop our imaginary thoughts. She gave a three minutes meditation practice in the end of the session.

Webinar on "Mental health in the Post COVID19 challenges and way forward"

Date: 23.02.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: Mental health in the Post COVID19 challenges and way forward

Resource person: Dr.C.JeyaKumar, Associate Professor, NIMHANS, Bangalore

No of Participants: 38 students

The COVID-19 pandemic has posed a serious threat to global mental health. Multiple lines of evidence suggest that there is a varying yet considerable increase in mental health issues among the general population and vulnerable groups. The aftermath is obscure and speculative from a social, economic, individual and public mental health perspective. Recently published studies support the existence of an emotional epidemic curve, describing a high probability of an increase in the burden of mental health issues in the post pandemic era. Furthermore, previous major public health emergencies showed that more than half of the population developed mental health problems and required mental health intervention. There is, therefore, an urgent need to reorganise existing mental health services to address the current unmet needs for mental health and to prepare for future challenges in the post pandemic era in terms of prevention and management.

Bereavement, isolation, loss of income and fear are triggering mental health conditions or exacerbating existing ones. Many people may be facing increased levels of alcohol and drug use, insomnia, and anxiety.

Meanwhile, COVID-19 itself can lead to neurological and mental complications, such as delirium, agitation, and stroke. People with pre-existing mental, neurological or substance use disorders are also more vulnerable to SARS-CoV-2 infection−they may stand a higher risk of severe outcomes and even death.

Today's webinar on "Mental health in the Post COVID19 challenges and way forward" by Dr.C.JeyaKumar, Associate Professor, NIMHANS,Bangalore gave us clear orientation about the challenges we are facing in the post Covid-19 and the way to overcome those challenges.

Webinar on Happiness

Date: 21.08.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 pm

Topic: Happiness

Resource person: Mr.Rajendrakumar Kapoor, Freelance Counsellor

No of Students: 22

Happiness is an electrifying and elusive state. Philosophers, theologians, psychologists, and even economists have long sought to define it. And since the 1990s, a whole branch of psychology positive psychology has been dedicated to pinning it down. More than simply a positive mood, happiness is a state of well-being that encompasses living a good life, one with a sense of meaning and deep contentment.

Feeling joyful has its health perks as well. A growing body of research also suggests that happiness can improve your physical health; feelings of positivity and fulfillment seem to benefit cardiovascular health, the immune system, inflammation levels, and blood pressure, among other things. Happiness has even been linked to a longer lifespan as well as a higher quality of life and well-being.

Attaining happiness is a global pursuit. Researchers find that people from every corner of the world rate happiness more important than other desirable personal outcomes, such as obtaining wealth, acquiring material goods, and getting into heaven.

Our today's online webinar on "Happiness "was facilitated by Mr.Rajendrakumar Kapoor Freelance Counsellor. Students enthusiastically participated in the webinar.

Parents and friends play different roles in the life of a teen. Where friends will introduce them to new ideas and ways of doing things, you can provide a secure grounding and strong values for their future. Good friends will positively affect your teenager's self-esteem, interests, and attitudes, and give them a support network to rely on in addition to their family.

Use your own positive experiences of friendship to help guide your teenager. The friends they choose will be their decision, but you can help steer them towards good ones:

1. Talk about the value of honesty
2. Highlight good qualities in their peers
3. Help your teenager bond with others over common interests
4. Support the way your teen likes to socialize
5. Use your own friendships as an example
6. Support your teen in developing their judgment
7. If you're worried about negative influences on your teen.

Our today's webinar on "Best Buddies" was facilitated by Vasavi Dhinesh, Child Psychologist. She explicated the healthy friendship of adolescent children, how to deal with them in a positive manner, Tips to improvise our relationship with adolescent children etc.

Webinar on Introduction to EFT

Date: 23.08.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 pm

Topic: Introduction to EFT

Resource person: Ms.Mahalakshmi Rajagopal Holistic Wellness Practitioner, Founder & Director M/s.Sahayam, Hyderabad

No of Students: 21

Our today's Webinar on "Emotional Freedom Technique" was facilitated by Mahalakshmi Rajagopal, Holistic Wellness Practitioner, Founder & Director m/s.Sahayam, Hyderabad. She explained the following, Emotional Freedom Technique (EFT) is a revolutionary treatment method that offers healing from physical and emotional pain and disease. Without the use of needles, this form of acupuncture uses the fingertips to stimulate energy points in the body. Developed by Gary Craig, this is an easily mastered technique that can be performed virtually anywhere. This treatment sprang from the idea that "The cause of all negative emotions is a disruption in the body's energy system."

EFT works by tapping on acupressure meridians to release blockages. When these blockages are released, the problem feeling can be released and move through the body. The process starts with a beginning statement of what the problem feeling is and includes a complete acceptance and acknowledgment of the problem. To start the process of EFT, the person would say something like, “Even though I have this (fear) about (the time I was criticized for being clumsy), I completely accept myself anyway." Often that will not feel true to a person, so they would modify the statement to say, “I am willing to learn to accept myself” or “I want to accept myself." The client says the statement three times while tapping on the karate chop point. In the second part of this treatment, the client focuses on the feeling (fear) in the body and rates it at an intensity between 1-10. Then the client begins to tap on points around the face while saying “this fear” simultaneously. Several rounds of this can be done until the fear is rated at a zero on a scale from 1-10. Once that fear is gone, the therapist will guide the client to feel other fears that will then come up from different aspects of the same situation or emotional state.

EFT is a very effective way of clearing out feelings, and when an unwanted feeling is gone, the limiting beliefs that the client held are released. New, more positive beliefs about themselves can emerge. Learning EFT also empowers the client to take charge of handling their emotional state because they can tap on a feeling any time they want to move out of a painful feeling.

Webinar on Systemic Family Therapy

Date: 25.08.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 pm

Topic: Systemic Family Therapy

Resource person: Dr.Suresh Kumar Murugesan, Head - P G Dept of Psychology, The American college, Madurai

No of Students: 15

Our today’s webinar on “ Systemic Family Therapy “ was facilitated by Dr.Suresh Kumar Murugesan, HOD, Department of Psychology, American College. He explained the following Family therapy (also known as systemic therapy) enables family members to express and explore difficult thoughts and emotions safely, understand each other's experiences and views, appreciate each other's needs, build on family strengths and make useful changes in their relationships and their lives.

The key difference between Systemic & Family Therapy and all the many variations of individual psychological interventions is that while individual therapy gives one person the space to discuss and reflect during 'time out of their human system, systemic therapy brings parts or all of the system into the therapy.

Strategic therapy has five different parts: a brief social stage, the problem stage, the interactional stage, the goal-setting stage, and the task-setting stage.

Systemic therapy focuses on the interactions and relationships between the group to help them address any problems and to move on. It gives all the members of the group the chance to explore their feelings and say what they think in a safe, non-judgmental environment.

In particular, systemic therapy traces its roots to the Milan school of Mara Selvini Palazzoli, but also derives from the work of Salvador Minuchin, Murray Bowen, Ivan Boszormenyi-Nagy, as well as Virginia Satir, and Jay Haley from MRI in Palo Alto.

What Are Types of Family Therapy? There are four types of family therapists most often utilized by professionals: supportive family therapy, cognitive-behavioral therapy, psychodynamic ideas, and systemic family therapy.

Systemic therapy may also be efficacious for anxiety disorders. Results were stable across follow-up periods of up to 5 years. There is a sound evidence-base for the efficacy of systemic therapy for adult index patients with mental disorders in at least five diagnostic groups.

During family systems therapy, the family works individually and together to resolve a problem that directly affects one or more family members. Each family member has the opportunity to express their thoughts and feelings about how they are affected.

Date: 01.11.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: SWITCH ON, SWITCH OFF

Resource Person: Dr.Vidyaa Hari Iyer, Psychotherapist, Counselor, and Wellness coach

No of Participants: 18 students

Our today's online webinar topic is the interesting one. The topic was "Switch ON Switch OFF" and was facilitated by Dr.Vidyaa Hari, Psychotherapist, Counselor, and Wellness Coach. She discussed the following under topic. Throughout life, humans experience many emotions. This range of emotions is impacted by such factors as their behaviour, culture, and previous traumatic experiences. A study published in Neuroscience and biobehavioural Reviews found a link between the greater brain in areas that process fear and post-traumatic stress disorder. According to Psychology Today, traumatic experiences impact our emotions, causing PTSD flashbacks, nightmares, increased fear, anxiety, anger, Sadness, and guilt.

Mind is not just a thought. It includes our emotions as well as unconscious mental-emotional reactive patterns. Strong emotion causes changes in the biochemistry of the body. These biochemical changes represent the physical or material aspect of emotions. We are not usually conscious of all the thought patterns so only by watching our emotions we can create awareness. The three states of mind are the Emotional mind, the Wise mind, and the Reasonable mind.

Emotions and feelings are all traits we share as humans. Emotions are multifaceted experiences of internal subjective experiences, facial expressions, and physiological reactions. Teasing out the feelings and emotions that people have and learning why they have them is an important role for mental health professionals. Feelings are both emotional experiences and physical sensations –such as hunger or pain. An emotion is discovered through its associated thoughts, beliefs, desires, and actions. Emotions are not conscious but instead manifest in the unconscious mind. Emotions can be brought to the surface of the conscious state through extended psychotherapy. A Fundamental difference between feelings and emotions is that feelings are experienced consciously, while emotions manifest either consciously or subconsciously. Some people may spend years or even a lifetime not understanding the depths of their emotions. There are six kinds of basic emotions which are differentially associated with three core effects: Reward (happiness), Punishment (Sadness), and Stress (fear and anger).

We must Switch OFF: Disbelief, Feelings of fear, shock, anger, worry, numbness, and frustration, changes in appetite, energy, desires, and interests, Difficulty in sleeping, nightmares, Physical reactions such as headache and body pain, Worsening of Chronic health problems, Worsening of Mental health conditions, increased use of tobacco, alcohol and other substance abuse, take breaks from watching social media and hearing gossip stories.

We must Switch ON: Take care of ourselves, Take care of our body, Make time to unwind, and Talk to others and Connect with our community or faith-based Organizations

Our today's takeaway: "Live life your style, Smell the roses, Watch the butterflies, Feel the rain on your face, Hug your loved ones, stroll and let loose your thoughts. Live each moment of your life, Life is to experience and relish every second you will never get a second chance for the last moment". Thanks to Dr.Vidyaa Hari for her inspiring poetic words.

ONLINE WEBINAR ON "CREATING MY HAPPY DAY"

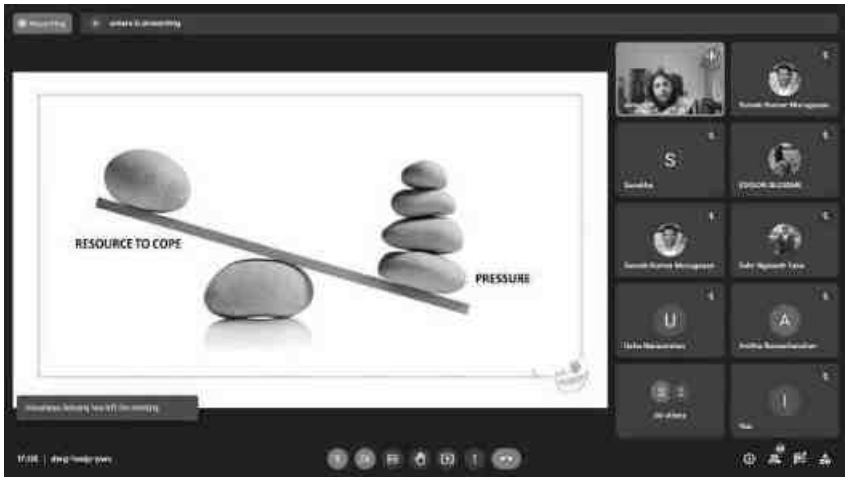
Date: 08.11.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: CREATING MY HAPPY DAY

Resource Person: Antara Sen Dave, Consultant well-being practitioner

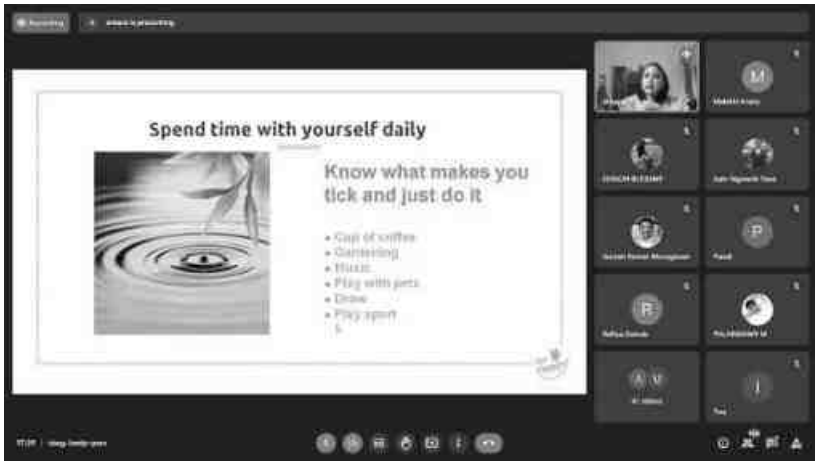
No of Participants: 28 students



Our today's online webinar on "Creating My Happy Day" was facilitated by Antara Sen Dave, the Consultant well-being Practitioner. She discussed the following content in the webinar session. Happiness is and will always be the most cherished, yet most elusive, of all human desires. Day in and day out, many searches for happiness, but end the day empty-handed. Happiness isn't something that someone gives us, nor is it something that we have to have permission for. Happiness is a state of mind that is created from within. Here are 11 ways to ensure happiness is a part of your everyday life. We must have the following things in mind to make our day pleasant.

1. State your achievements
2. Include the little things you love in your day-to-day life
3. Do what you love
4. Paint your perfect day

Take these 3 steps to achieve your perfect day:



1. Realize you have the power to achieve anything you've ever wanted and no one else can do the work for you.
2. Figure out what your perfect day looks like.
3. You must believe 100% that your perfect day will become a reality.
5. Put yourself above everything else
6. Tell yourself today will be awesome
7. Forget being perfect and accept yourself as is
8. Surround yourself with the right company
9. Stop worrying and keep it moving
10. Get out of your comfort zone and become bold
11. Have a feel-good song

Our today takeaway: You are an essential part of that circle of influence for yourself..

ONLINE WEBINAR ON "THE ART OF THINKING"

Date: 17.11.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: THE ART OF THINKING

Resource Person: Ms.Pooja Kapoor, Counsellor and Hypnotherapist at your Confidant, Cuttack

No of Participants: 19 students

Our today's online webinar on "The Art of thinking" was facilitated by Ms. Pooja Kapoor, Counsellor and Hypnotherapist at your Confidant, Cuttack. She discussed the following content in the webinar session. Thinking is in itself not pure but prone to error. Cognitive traps aren't just occasional errors in judgment but rather routine mistakes we stumble over through generations. We value sunk costs instead of future outcomes. We seek evidence to justify our beliefs rather than form our beliefs based on evidence. We prefer wrong information to no information, and we fall prey to the delusion that more information guarantees better decisions. When we put a lot of energy into a task, we tend to overvalue the result. Often, we fail to think exponentially and probabilistically.

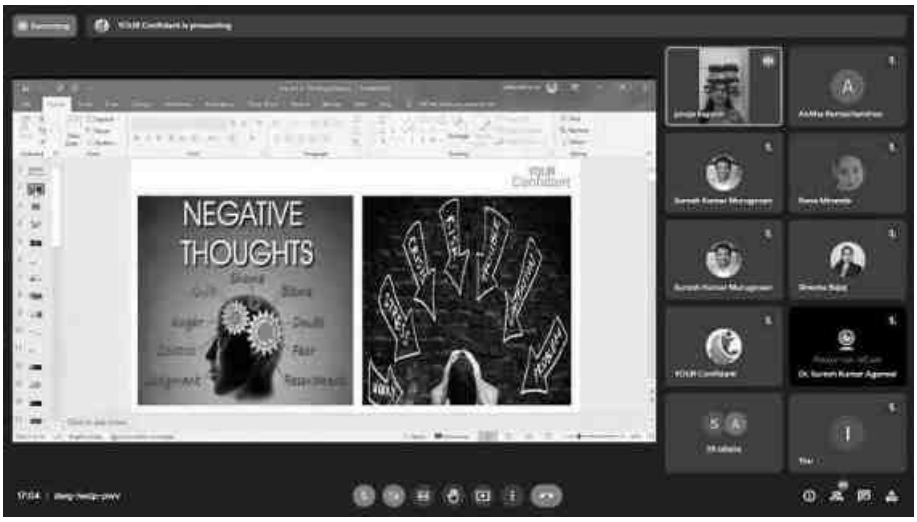
Positive thinking means approaching life's challenges with a positive outlook. It doesn't mean seeing the world through rose-coloured lenses by ignoring or glossing over the negative aspects of life.

Positive thinking does not necessarily mean avoiding difficult situations. Instead, positive thinking means making the most of potential obstacles, trying to see the best in other people, and viewing yourself and your abilities in a positive light.

• Optimistic explanatory style: People with an optimistic explanatory style tend to give themselves credit when good things happen and typically blame outside forces for bad outcomes. They also tend to see negative events as temporary and atypical.

• Pessimistic explanatory style: People with a pessimistic explanatory style often blame themselves when bad things happen, but fail to give themselves adequate credit for successful outcomes.3 they also have a tendency to view negative events as expected and lasting. As you can imagine, blaming yourself for events outside of your control or viewing these unfortunate events as a persistent part of your life can have a detrimental impact on your state of mind.

Positive thinkers are more apt to use an optimistic explanatory style, but the way in which people attribute events can also vary depending upon the exact situation. For example, a person who is generally a positive thinker might use a more pessimistic explanatory style in particularly challenging situations, such as at work or at school.



Our today's take-home message: When you control your thoughts, you control your mind, when you control your mind, you control your life. And once you reach the state of being in total control of your life, you become the master of your destiny.

ONLINE WEBINAR ON "INFORMATION OVERLOADED"

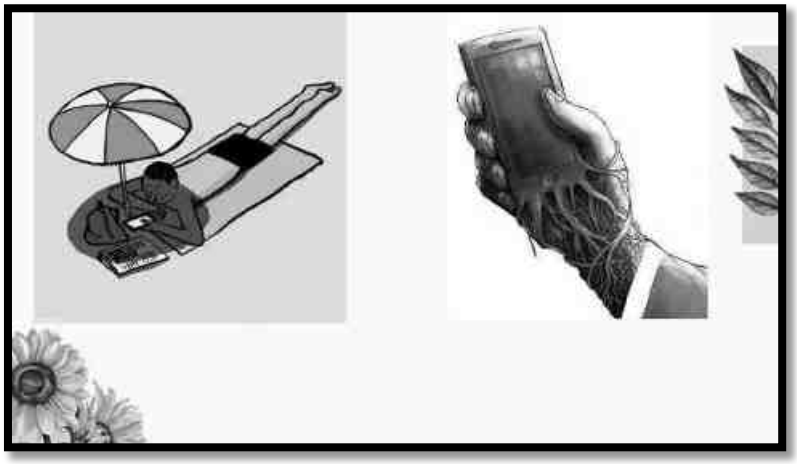
Date: 18.11.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: INFORMATION OVERLOADED

Resource Person: Ms.Soumya, Clinical Counsellor

No of Participants: 32 students



Our Today's online webinar topic was the need for the hour, "Information Overloaded" which was facilitated by Ms. Sowmya, Clinical Counsellor. She discussed the following in the webinar session. We live in an information-driven era, where we are surrounded by various sources of information. Our brain can store the entire content of the internet, but our working memory has a capacity of only 3-4 items worth of information. Information overload is a state of being overwhelmed by the amount of data presented for one's attention or processing. But how is this happening? Huge volumes of new information being constantly created ■ Pressure to create and compete in information provision – leading to a quantity over quality effect in many industries ■ The simplicity of creating, duplicating, and sharing information online ■ The exponential increase in channels to receive information by; radio, television, print media, websites, e-mail, mobile telephony, RSS feeds, etc. The increasing weight of historical data available to us ■ High volumes of conflicting, contradictory, and plain old inaccurate information ■ No simple methodologies for quickly processing, comparing, and evaluating information sources.

How does information overload affect us? 1. Procrastination 2. Lack of attention and concentration 3. Physical Isolation 4. Mood swings 5. Sleep problems 6. Reduced physical activity 7. Low creativity 8. Low social, emotional, and physical development in children 9. Aggressive behavior 10. Decision Paralysis 11. Addiction to technology 12. Living a reel life

WHAT CAN WE DO ABOUT IT? Let's come to our solutions:

1. Brain Dump
2. Follow the two-minute rule
3. Clump together similar tasks
4. Don't multitask
5. Limit the distractions of email
6. "Eat the frog" first thing in the morning
7. Spend only as much time on decisions, tasks, and activities as they are worth.
8. Take breaks
9. Changing your mind-set

Today take home message: We can move away from the shackles of technology and spend some time gardening. It helps fight disease, builds strength, improves memory, boosts mood, reduces stress, helps addiction recovery, fosters human connections, and heals and empowers. We can connect with nature and read books that soothe us. Walks in nature help your memory, you feel happier, nature can literally heal, you can concentrate better, it prompts weight loss, your vitamin D supply improves, nature limits your stress, and your age less painfully.

ONLINE WEBINAR ON "NEUROSCIENCE OF HOPE"

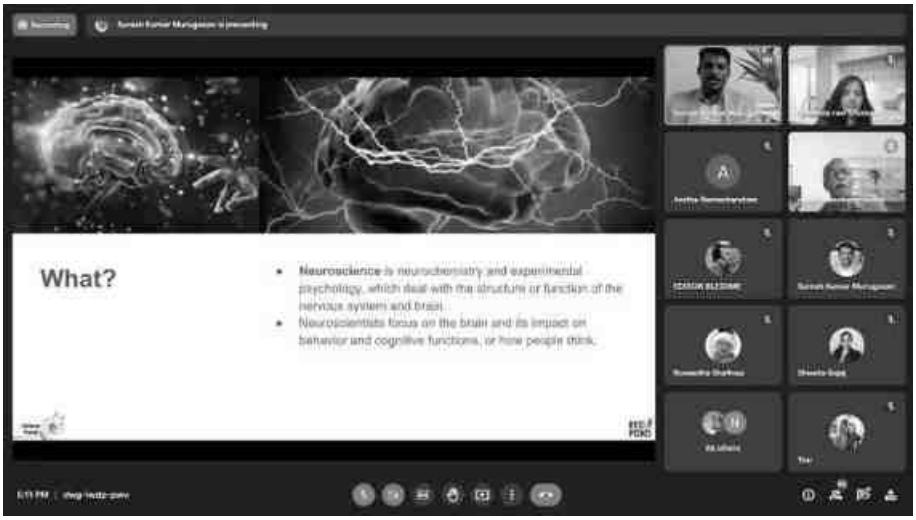
Date: 22.11.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: NEUROSCIENCE OF HOPE

Resource Person: Dr.Suresh Kumar Murugesan, Head-PG Dept, The Department of Psychology, The American College, Madurai

No of Participants: 25 students



Our today's webinar on "Neuroscience of Hope" was facilitated by Dr. Suresh Kumar Murugesan, Head- P G Dept. of Psychology, The American College, Madurai. He discussed the following in this session.

Hope is important for your brain. Neuroscientists are investigating the science of hope. It turns out that a feeling of hopefulness changes your brain. Your brain pumps chemicals when experiencing the sensation of hope. These chemicals can block pain and accelerate healing.

Hope, which involves belief and expectation, causes the brain to release neurochemicals called endorphins and enkephalins which actually mimic the effects of morphine. The result is that the brain can overcome hurdles and move to a place of recovery. In scientific terms, hope and recovery are not causally connected, but they are correlated.

I believe hope is as vital to the brain as the oxygen we breathe.

Times are difficult these days. A feeling of hopefulness can make a real difference!

In the brain, people experience optimism about the future in two key areas: the amygdala, our emotion processing center, and part of a region called the anterior cingulate cortex that is involved in thinking about the self, reflecting on the past, and anticipating the future, particularly with an emotional lens.

In a recent study, Chinese psychologists found out that hope protects the brain against anxiety and expanded our understanding of how that may be happening. Because hope is considered a stable personality trait, they reasoned, they might be able to figure out where in the brain they can find hope functioning. They were able not only to pinpoint where hope might potentially reside within the brain but realized how hope may be shielding the brain from the effects of anxiety.

The scientists defined hope as an important topic in positive psychology, referring to an individual's "goal-oriented expectations" that include both agency (desire to achieve goals) and pathways (finding ways to achieve them).

ONLINE WEBINAR ON "NEUROSCIENCE OF AMUSEMENT"

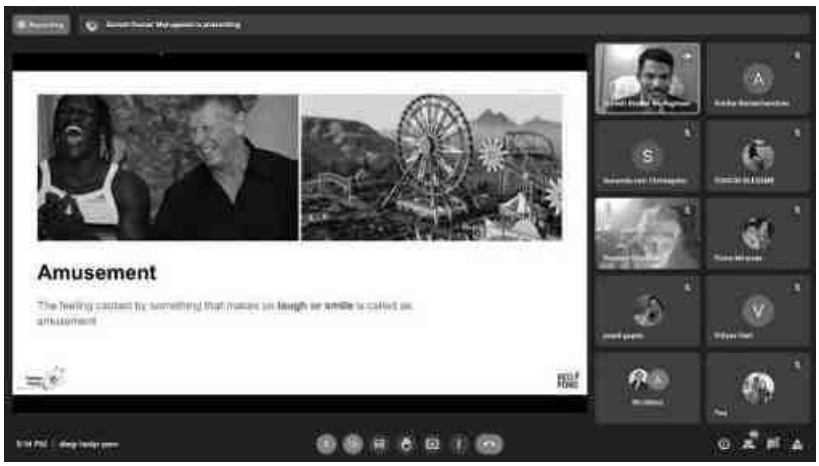
Date: 24.11.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: NEUROSCIENCE OF AMUSEMENT

Resource Person: Dr.Suresh Kumar Murugesan, Head-PG Dept, The Department of Psychology, The American College, Madurai

No of Participants: 29 students



Our today's webinar on "Neuroscience of Amusement" was facilitated by Dr.Suresh Kumar Murugesan, Head-PG Dept of Psychology, The American College, Madurai. He discussed the following content under the topic. Emotions involve subjective experiences, behavioral performances, and physiological responses. Research concerning autonomic states corresponding to different emotions has prevailed for several decades. The present study was designed to investigate how specific emotions influence cardiac activities that reflect autonomic responses. Affective videos selected from a standardized Chinese database were used to induce amused, fearful, angry, and neutral emotions, while electrocardiogram and self-rated emotional experiences were recorded. Heart rate was significantly lower in the amused condition than in the angry, fearful and neutral condition. There were no significant differences among the latter three conditions. The root means square of successive differences, an index of heart rate variability (HRV), was significantly larger in the amused condition than in the fearful, neutral, and angry conditions. It was also significantly larger in the angry condition than in the fearful condition. There were no significant differences between the fearful and neutral, or angry and neutral conditions. These results revealed that: (1) amusement activates the parasympathetic nervous system, and (2) compared with fear, anger is more likely to be linked with parasympathetic activation. We suggest that HRV, rather than the valence dimension (i.e., positive or negative) be regarded as a potential index to discriminate emotions related to approach or avoidance motivation.

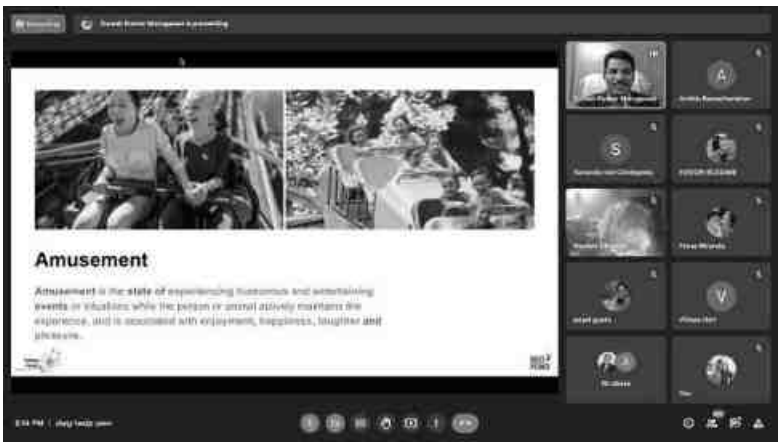
As the most important entities that serve adaptive functions, emotions allow humans to behave in ways that increase their opportunities to survive and flourish. Emotional responses involve subjective experiences, and behavioural, and physiological changes. Research concerning the relation between subjective experience and physiological response dates back to the James-Lange theory of emotion, which suggested that the physiological response to a stimulus is antecedent to, and provides the basis for, the emotional experience Although it is still debated in the scientific literature, this idea has led to a search for autonomic states specific to different emotions for several decades According to this theory, each kind of emotion expresses a person's appraisal of a person-environment relationship involving a particular kind of harm or benefit. The appraisal generates action tendencies in response to the harm or benefit at hand. The preparation and execution of action sequences are emotion-specific and supported by corresponding metabolic resources that are linked to the activity of the autonomic nervous system.



Heartbeat is primarily produced by the sinoatrial node, which generates action potentials that course throughout the cardiac tissue, causing regions of the heart muscles to contract in the orchestrated fashion that characterizes a heartbeat. Meanwhile, the heart is innervated by the sympathetic and parasympathetic branches of the autonomic nervous system, which regulate the heart rate by influencing the activity of the sinoatrial node. Activation of sympathetic fibers has an excitatory influence on the firing rate of the sinoatrial node, resulting in increased heart rate. Alternatively, parasympathetic activation has an inhibitory influence on the pace-making activity of the sinoatrial node and produces decreased heart rate.

We would contrast anger with fear, both of which belong to negative emotions, to discern whether motivation influences HR or HRV. Meanwhile, these negative emotions would also be contrasted with positive emotions to find the influence of emotional valence on HR and HRV. Previous research has revealed that most of the negative emotions elicited by various means increased HR and decreased HRV, while positive emotion had an ambivalent influence on HR and HRV. Therefore, we expected that amusement would decrease HR and increase HRV when compared with fear and anger. As anger is related to approach motivation and fear with avoidance motivation, anger was expected to increase HRV when compared with fear. Thanks to Dr.Suresh for his wonderful session.

ONLINE WEBINAR ON "POWER OF APPEARANCE MANAGEMENT"

Date: 25.11.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: POWER OF APPEARANCE MANAGEMENT

Resource Person: Ms. Vibha Kapoor, Personal Styling Coach

No of Participants: 25 students

Our today's online webinar topic is "Power of Appearance Management" which was facilitated by Ms.Vibha Kapoor, Personal Styling Coach. She discussed the following in the session. Appearance Management is a process enacted with others in mind that involves experimentation and self-expression. Appearance Management includes dress as a process as well as the assessment of the social consequences of one's appearance. Individuals engage in Appearance Management each day of their lives, even though the level of involvement and concerns related to dress and appearance may differ from person to person and culture to culture.

Occupational health departments will take note of people dressing inappropriately because it could prove to be dangerous, for example, young girls wearing platform shoes that are too high could be risky, or perhaps loose shoes such as a flip-flop style could be unsafe depending on the working environment. Also, clothes which are torn or too long in length, which although may presently be the fashion, could be hazardous around unforgiving machinery, therefore careful consideration of a sensible work dress code is essential.

Personal presentation is just as important as a skill or qualification and every employee of a company must understand and be fully aware of the effect of their personal appearance because your "overall look" symbolizes what you are and it is an instant communication of "first impression" to other people. Looks certainly do matter and if you look good you feel good, you will boost your self-esteem and self-confidence; good presentation enhances personality.

Everyone is in control of their appearance and bear in mind that when you are groomed and neat you are making a positive statement about your personality, attitude, and values. By paying particular attention to your clothes you can create an affordable, professional and attractive appearance.

It is perfectly acceptable that people will judge a new employee on their appearance, including clothes, body language, and facial expressions – visual impact is about attitude. Bear in mind that working on your body language can improve your overall personal presentation, avoid troubled and anxious facial expressions and stand upright as all these factors contribute towards optimism.

Image management is the ongoing process of evaluating and controlling the impact of your appearance and the resulting response on you and others. The concept of image management applies to anyone who has ever needed to improve self-image, self-esteem, self-confidence, capability, and credibility. It applies to anyone who has ever wanted to get an idea across to someone else, to influence opinion or action—be it in the home, school, church, community, or business setting. It is creating an authentic, appropriate, attractive, and affordable image. Intelligence, knowledge, ability, initiative, and effort are vital to the success of any kind, but regardless of who you are, how old, and what your role or goal is, ongoing image management can give you the personal/professional presence you need. As an individual living and working in a highly complex and competitive society, you must recognize and understand the impact of your appearance as it communicates first to you and then to others. What you wear and the way you look affects 1. the way you think, 2. the way you feel, 3. the way you act or behave, and then 4. The way others react or respond to you. While it is important to like what you wear and the way you look, it is more important to understand why or why not and specifically how this affects you, others, your life, and the achievement of your goals.

ONLINE WEBINAR ON "MENTAL HYGIENE"

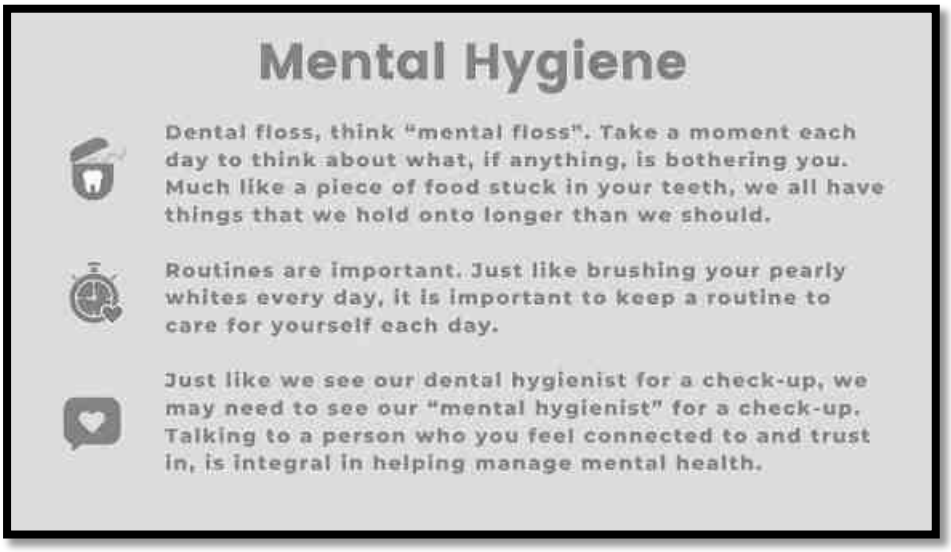
Date: 30.11.2022

Time: 5 pm to 6 p.m.

Topic: MENTAL HYGIENE

Resource Person: Mrs. Latha Janaki Ramanujam, Counselling Psychologist, and Psychotherapist of JAYS.

No of Participants: 29 students



Our today's webinar on "Mental Hygiene" was facilitated by Mrs. Latha Janaki Ramanujam, Counselling Psychologist, and Psychotherapist of JAYS. She discussed the following content in her session. The term "mental hygiene" refers to daily activities that support and maintain mental health. Public health guidelines tell us that we need to do small tasks daily to maintain our physical and dental hygiene, like showering and brushing our teeth. We are now extending the same concept to mental health. Just like going to the gym is about building up our strength, mental hygiene is about building up that mental muscle. It's an important way to maintain good mental health and build the resilience we need to help face challenges in the future. Read more about mental hygiene right here. The psychological repercussions of this health emergency have highlighted the necessity to maintain well-being through mental hygiene. This medical practice, initiated by the American psychiatrist Clifford Whittingham Beers back in 1909, defines the set of practices that allow a person to enjoy mental health and be in harmony with his or her socio-cultural surroundings. The behaviors that it covers are designed to prevent negative behavior provide emotional stability and improve quality of life. Good mental health enables us to learn, reason, interact, produce, face difficulties, and put our best face on things, to quote a few examples. That's why the UN and WHO warns that its decline presents a grave social and economic problem: depression and anxiety alone produce annual losses of over $1bn at the global level, whilst serious mental health issues reduce life expectancy by 10 to 20 years.

Some examples of mental hygiene practices?

Mindful deep breathing, journaling, guided meditation, gratitude exercises, and spending time in nature are some examples of activities that have been shown to foster healthy cognitive patterns that are conducive to well-being. For a full list, instructions, and links to how-to videos, download our PDF toolkit.

Just like we brush our teeth every day for our dental health, we also need to do something every day for our mental health. Research shows that spending at least 10 minutes every day doing certain research-based mental hygiene practices has real and measurable benefits.

If you’d like to try to turn mental hygiene into a daily habit, try The Royal Mental Hygiene Challenge. It’s easy – just pledge to incorporate 10 minutes of mental hygiene practices into your day for 30 days. You can use some of the resources developed at The Royal to help you throughout this journey to building healthy habits.

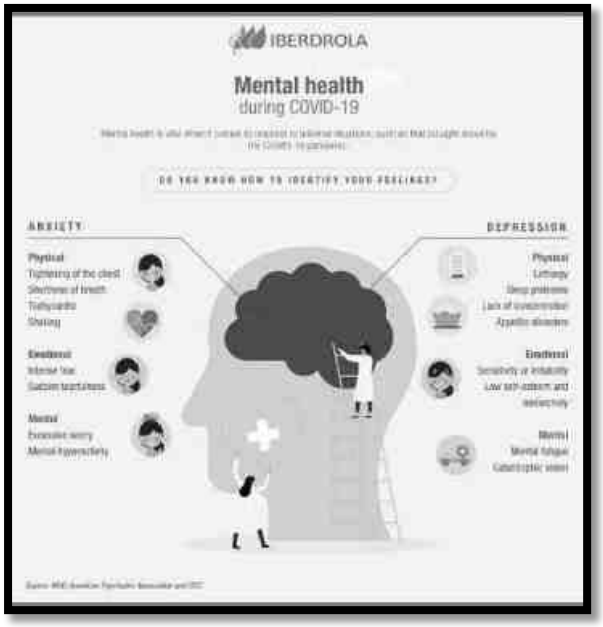
Challenge yourself and others to practice at least 10 minutes of mental hygiene for 30 days. Kick-start some healthy habits for your mental wellness!

Step one: Download the PDF toolkit for the full list of mental hygiene practices, instructions, and links to how-to videos.

Step two: Choose one of our free tracking calendars to keep tabs on your progress. It’s optional, but we highly recommend it. Simply add the date into each box and check off when you've completed your mental hygiene for the day! The calendar is a handy reminder, and it will help keep you accountable to yourself. There are three styles to choose from:

• Rainbow Unicorn Power

• Super Minimalist



• Positively Vintage

Choose one, print it out, and post it where you can see it every day, or fill it out electronically. We have a mobile version, too! Step three: Spend at least ten minutes on any mental hygiene practice listed in the toolkit for 30 days. You can do the ten minutes in one go, or in smaller intervals throughout the day. You can also combine practices or adapt them to make them work for you!

Today take home message: Good mental hygiene gives us balance, health, and well-being in our day-to-day lives.

MEDICAL CAMP

A Free Medical camp was conducted at Ilakku on 12th November 2022. It was a combined program of Ilakku, TANKER Foundation, and Surya Medi Groups. Online Webinar on "Life Skills"

Date: 08.12.2022

Time: 5.00 pm to 6.00 pm

Topic: Life Skills

Facilitator: Dr.Vasanthi Jason, Independent Consultant

No of Participants: 27 students

Our today's online webinar on "Life skills" was facilitated by Dr.Vasanthi Jason, Independent Consultant. She discussed the following in the session. Life skills are defined as "a group of psychosocial competencies and interpersonal skills that help people make informed decisions, solve problems, think critically and creatively, communicate effectively, build healthy relationships, empathize with others, and cope with and manage their lives healthily and productively. Life skills may be directed toward personal actions or actions toward others, as well as toward actions to change the surrounding environment to make it conducive to health." according to World Health Organization (WHO). Bearing the WHO definition in mind, the Basic Life Skills curriculum offers youth the emotional, social, and intellectual tools needed to achieve success in life – on a personal level, an interpersonal level, and within their community and workplaces. The three major types of life skills are Self-awareness — knowing and living with oneself. Interpersonal Skills — knowing and living with others. Thinking Skills — making effective decisions.

In addition to personal development, life skills prepare you for the professional world. You learn how to confidently tackle problems and step outside your comfort zone. You establish healthy work-life boundaries and start paying attention to the people around you. Moreover, you continue to learn and grow at every step, making room for new skills and knowledge. Let's look at the importance of life skills in the workplace. The life skills are 1.Self-Awareness: If you're able to appreciate and differentiate between your strengths and weaknesses, you're a self-aware individual. It helps you make choices, take actions and make decisions that are consistent with your abilities. 2. Self-Esteem: It refers to the way you feel about yourself and what others think of you. People with healthy self-esteem trust themselves and their abilities. They aren't afraid of what others think about them. 3. Interpersonal Relationships: Humans are social beings by nature and friendly relationships boost social and mental well-being. 4. Assertiveness: It isn't easy to put your foot down, without hurting somebody's feelings. Assertiveness teaches you how to maintain a delicate balance by helping you express yourself freely without hurting someone's feelings. In the workplace, it's especially difficult to establish boundaries and say no to people. By being assertive, you can communicate your needs and expectations in a respectful manner.5.Effective Communication: One of the most crucial life skills, effective communication, includes verbal and non-verbal communication. It goes beyond a simple exchange of words or gestures and involves the ability to express yourself clearly. 6. Critical Thinking: It refers to the ability to think critically i.e., separating facts from opinions. This enhances how we articulate and express our thoughts and ideas. The flexibility and fluency in the thought process make room for creative and innovative thinking. 7. Decision-Making: The ability to use available information to assess a situation and make an informed choice is known as decision-making. It helps develop problem-solving skills and is a highly valuable trait in the workplace 8. Time Management: Time management helps you stay on track, organize your activities and work well under pressure. It further reduces stress and allows you to set goals successfully. You must manage your time smartly to stay organized and on top of your priorities. 9. Negotiation: People often view negotiation as a zero-sum game, while in reality, it involves a win-win situation. The ability to compromise or settle an argument that benefits everyone is the cornerstone of successful negotiation. It's an important interpersonal skill that helps resolve conflicts and solves problems.10.Empathy: High emotional intelligence and empathy allow you to accept others who may be very different from you. You show compassion and, support and respond to situations appropriately. Empathy improves the quality of social relationships, encouraging trust and respect between you and others.

Online Webinar on "Positive Psychology"

Date: 11.12.2022

Time: 5.00 pm to 6.00 pm

Topic: Positive Psychology

Facilitator: Vaishaly, Positive Psychologist, Founder of PSYKEY-Unlock Psychology

No of Participants: 22 students

Today's online webinar on "Positive Psychology" was facilitated by Vaishaly, Positive Psychologist, and Founder of PSYKEY-Unlock Psychology. She discussed the following in the session. Positive psychology is a branch of psychology focused on the character strengths and behaviors that allow individuals to build a life of meaning and purpose—to move beyond surviving to flourish. Theorists and researchers in the field have sought to identify the elements of a good life. They have also proposed and tested practices for improving life satisfaction and well-being.

Positive psychology emphasizes the meaning and deep satisfaction, not just fleeting happiness. Martin Seligman, often regarded as the father of positive psychology, has described multiple visions of living happily, including the Pleasant Life (Hollywood's view of happiness) and the Good Life (focused on personal strengths and engagement), and the Meaningful Life. Positive psychologists have explored a range of experiences and behaviors involved in different versions of positive living, including specific positive emotions, "flow" states, and a sense of meaning or purpose.

Fostering well-being is a primary focus in positive psychology. Higher levels of well-being are linked to increased productivity, a longer lifespan, and more satisfying relationships. In this regard, Seligman proposed the PERMA model to explain and define well-being in a broader sense. PERMA is an acronym for the five elements of well-being, and it has become a widely recognized model in the field of positive psychology. Below is a quick breakdown of the PERMA theory – Positive emotions: Experiencing positive emotions has a major impact on boosting well-being. Positive emotions may spring from fostering gratitude and forgiveness about past events, enjoying oneself in the moment, and being optimistic about the future E– Engagement: To enhance your well-being, it is also important to develop a sense of engagement. You can do this by completely absorbing yourself while doing something you enjoy and excel at. This sense of engagement produces an experience known as 'flow', a sensation you have when your skills are sufficient for a particular challenge with a particular goal in mind. The concept of "flow" was coined by Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi, a leading figure in the field of positive psychology – Relationships: As social beings, individuals often rely on building connections with other people to thrive, and the support we derive from these connections can give life purpose and meaning. M – Meaning: Experiencing positive emotions alone is not enough to lead a happy life. Seligman suggests that finding meaning is the highest form of happiness. Meaning can be achieved by applying your personal strengths to the service of something larger than you — like a social cause — a substantial contribution to a community you're a part of, or a charitable duty. A – Accomplishment: There is no doubt that when we achieve our goals and succeed, we feel a sense of fulfillment. If the drive to accomplish these goals doesn't exist, a true sense of well-being is difficult to attain.

According to Seligman's suggestions, you can enhance your sense of authentic happiness by focusing on doing more of the things that make you happy, so that you can enjoy your daily routines and experience more positive emotions. You should also work to improve the quality of your relationships and work on building stronger bonds with your friends and loved ones. Positive psychology has also been a subject of criticism and accused of advancing misleading ideas about positivity. As a result, the principles of positive psychology are sometimes dismissed as bearing more in common with self-help tactics than scientifically-proven theories.

Online Webinar on "Abundant blessings"

Date: 03.01.2023

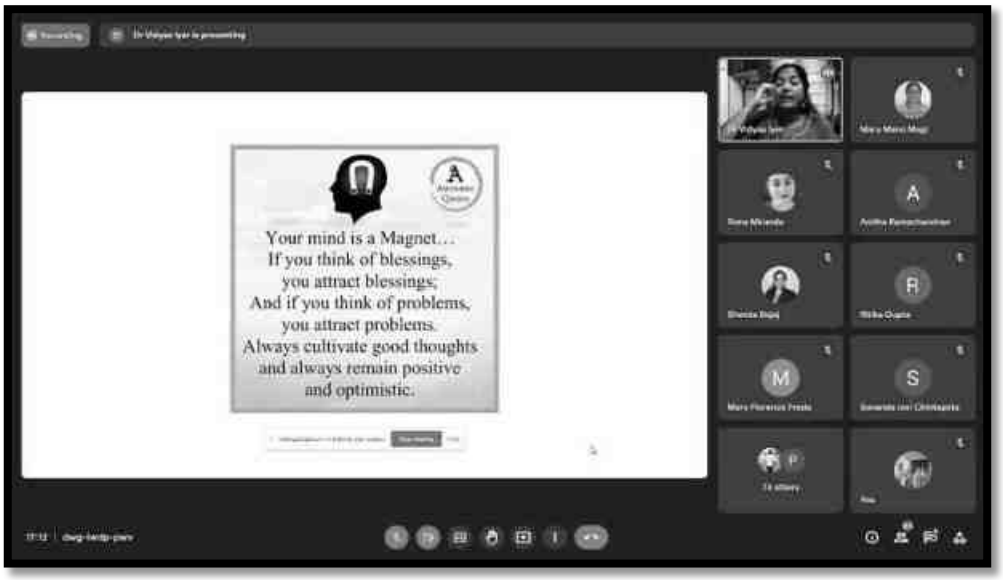
Time: 5.00 p.m. to 6.00 p.m.

Topic: Abundant blessings

Facilitator: Dr.Vidyaa Hari Iyer, Psychotherapist, Counselor, Wellness Coach

No of Participants: 29 Participants

Our today's online webinar on "Abundant Blessings" was facilitated by Dr.Vidyaa Hari, Psychotherapist, Counselor, and Wellness Coach. She discussed the following in her session.



Regardless of the culture or belief system, blessings are viewed as a way to bestow protection, give power, and show compassion for another person, place, or thing. Your mind is a Magnet, If you think of blessings, you attract blessings; and if you think of problems, you attract problems. Always cultivate good thoughts and always remain positive and optimistic. The fourfold blessing of God a. Divine Prosperity b. Divine health c. Fruitfulness and d. Long life. Chinese Culture: Five blessings, also known as the “Five Happiness” or “Five Good Fortunes” refer to Longevity, Wealth, Health and Composure, Love of Virtue, and the desire to die a natural death in old age (or timely health). The sixteen blessings for our life are 1. Good and Proper Education 2. Long life 3. Good Friends 4. Inexhaustible prosperity 5.Youthfulness 6. Disease-free body 7.Calm mind 8. Affectionate Spouse 9. Children with good character 10.Name and Fame 11. Truthfulness 12. Philanthropy 13.Theft-free Wealth 14. Good Government 15.Worry-free life and 16. Association with your great devotees. High-energy foods keep your body nourished and going at full throttle, they keep your mind clear and your thoughts positive. Low-energy foods keep you sluggish and Negative. Our body is asking for more high-vibration foods for life-giving energy foods and not for more processed ones. We must keep in mind “we love the food we eat and the food we eat loves us back. Ways to be a blessing to others: 1. Write a note of appreciation or encouragement 2. Share some homemade delicacies 3. Babysit for a young family 4. Give fresh flowers 5. Share a smile 6. Send an encouraging text message 7. Share a word of encouragement 8. Ask someone about their day and really listen 9. Take someone a meal 10. Give a hug 11. Buy an extra coffee drink and share it with someone. 12. Invite someone over. Blessing nurtures hope and wards off fear; it is a companion and assurance in times of peace and consolation and hope in times of crisis.

Benefits: a. It helps spread joy, both to the recipient and to yourself b. It helps build strong relationships 3. It keeps us from becoming selfish and totally focused on ourselves. 4. It helps us remember what is truly important in life: relationships, not things. 5. Our children benefit by seeing our example of serving others.

Online Webinar on "Schizophrenia: Management and treatment"

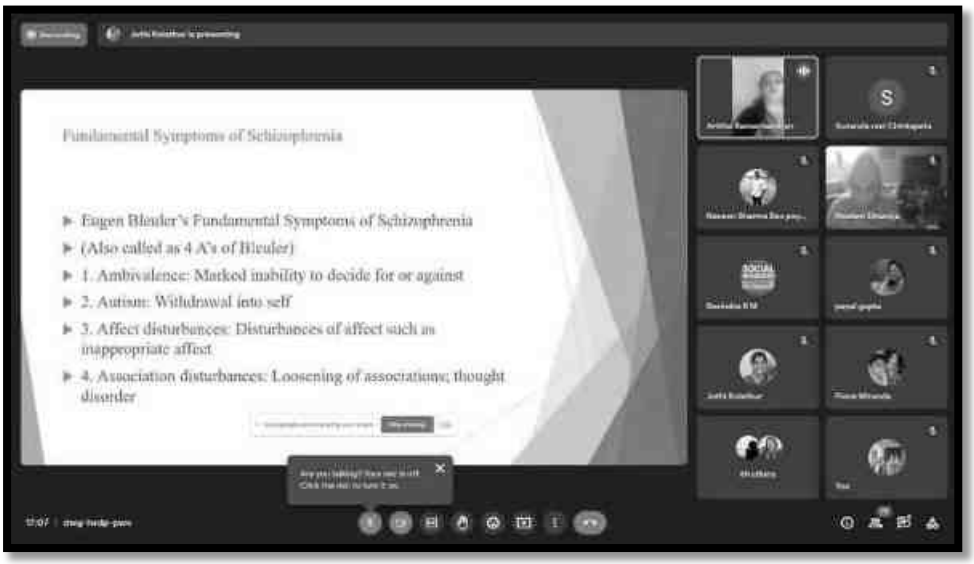
Date: 27.01.2023

Time: 5.00 p.m. to 6.00 p.m.

Topic: Schizophrenia: Management and treatment

Facilitator: Mrs. Anitha Ramachandran, Primary Grade Teacher/ Counsellor

No of Participants: 25 Participants



Schizophrenia is a serious mental disorder in which people interpret reality abnormally. Schizophrenia may result in some combination of hallucinations, delusions, and extremely disordered thinking and behaviour that impairs daily functioning, and can be disabling. People with schizophrenia require lifelong treatment. Early treatment may help get symptoms under control before serious complications develop and may help improve the long-term outlook.

Schizophrenia involves a range of problems with thinking (cognition), behavior, and emotions. Signs and symptoms may vary, but usually involve delusions, hallucinations, or disorganized speech, and reflect an impaired ability to function. Symptoms may include:

• Delusions. These are false beliefs that are not based on reality. For example, you think that you're being harmed or harassed; certain gestures or comments are directed at you; you have exceptional ability or fame; another person is in love with you; or a major catastrophe is about to occur. Delusions occur in most people with schizophrenia.

• Hallucinations. These usually involve seeing or hearing things that don't exist. Yet for the person with schizophrenia, they have the full force and impact of a normal experience. Hallucinations can be in any of the senses, but hearing voices is the most common hallucination.

• Disorganized thinking (speech). Disorganized thinking is inferred from disorganized speech. Effective communication can be impaired, and answers to questions may be partially or completely unrelated. Rarely, speech may include putting together meaningless words that can't be understood, sometimes known as word salad.

• Extremely disorganized or abnormal motor behavior. This may show in several ways, from childlike silliness to unpredictable agitation. Behavior isn't focused on a goal, so it's hard to do tasks. Behavior can include resistance to instructions, inappropriate or bizarre posture, a complete lack of response, or useless and excessive movement.

• Negative symptoms. This refers to a reduced or lack of ability to function normally. For example, the person may neglect personal hygiene or appear to lack emotion (doesn't make eye contact, doesn't change facial expressions, or speaks in a monotone). Also, the person may lose interest in everyday activities, socially withdraw or lack the ability to experience a pleasure.

Symptoms can vary in type and severity over time, with periods of worsening and remission of symptoms. Some symptoms may always be present.

In men, schizophrenia symptoms typically start in the early to mid-20s. In women, symptoms typically begin in the late 20s. It's uncommon for children to be diagnosed with schizophrenia and rare for those older than age 45.

Schizophrenia symptoms in teenagers are similar to those in adults, but the condition may be more difficult to recognize. This may be in part because some of the early symptoms of schizophrenia in teenagers are common for typical development during teen years, such as:

• Withdrawal from friends and family

• A drop in performance at school

• Trouble sleeping

• Irritability or depressed mood

• Lack of motivation

People with schizophrenia often lack awareness that their difficulties stem from a mental disorder that requires medical attention. So it often falls to family or friends to get them help.

If you think someone you know may have symptoms of schizophrenia, talk to him or her about your concerns. Although you can't force someone to seek professional help, you can offer encouragement and support and help your loved one find a qualified doctor or mental health professional.

If your loved one poses a danger to self or others or can't provide his or her own food, clothing, or shelter, you may need to call 911 or other emergency responders for help so that your loved one can be evaluated by a mental health professional.

In some cases, emergency hospitalization may be needed. Laws on involuntary commitment for mental health treatment vary by state. You can contact community mental health agencies or police departments in your area for details.

Suicidal thoughts and behavior

Suicidal thoughts and behavior are common among people with schizophrenia. If you have a loved one who is in danger of attempting suicide or has made a suicide attempt, make sure someone stays with that person. Call 911 or your local emergency number immediately. Or, if you think you can do so safely, take the person to the nearest hospital emergency room.

Workshop on “Know your Constitutional rights”

Date: 17.12.2022

Time: 10.00 am to 12.00 pm

Topic: Know your Constitutional rights

Facilitators: Ms.Harini and Ms. Janaranjani, Student mentor teachers

No. of Participants: 30 students

A workshop on “Fundamental rights” was conducted at Ilakku on 17th December 2022. The whole session was facilitated by the student mentor teachers Ms.Harini and Ms. Janaranjani They discussed the following in the session. What are the Fundamental Rights? Fundamental rights are the basic human rights enshrined in the Constitution of India which are guaranteed to all citizens. They are applied without discrimination on the basis of race, religion, gender, etc. Significantly, fundamental rights are enforceable by the courts, subject to certain conditions. Why are they called Fundamental Rights? These rights are called fundamental rights because of two reasons:

1. They are enshrined in the Constitution which guarantees them
2. They are justiciable (enforceable by courts). In case of a violation, a person can approach a court of law.

List of Fundamental Rights

There are six fundamental rights of Indian Constitution along with the constitutional articles related to them are mentioned below:

1. Right to Equality (Article 14-18)
2. Right to Freedom (Article 19-22)
3. Right against Exploitation (Article 23-24)
4. Right to Freedom of Religion (Article 25-28)
5. Cultural and Educational Rights (Article 29-30)
6. Right to Constitutional Remedies (Article 32)

Why Right to Property is not a Fundamental Right? There was one more fundamental right in the Constitution, i.e., the right to property. However, this right was removed from the list of fundamental rights by the 44th Constitutional Amendment. This was because this right proved to be a hindrance towards attaining the goal of socialism and redistributing wealth (property) equitably among the people.

Note: The right to property is now a legal right and not a fundamental right.

Introduction to Six Fundamental Rights (Articles 12 to 35)

Under this section, we list the fundamental rights in India and briefly describe each of them.

1. Right to Equality (Articles 14 – 18)

Right to equality guarantees equal rights for everyone, irrespective of religion, gender, caste, race or place of birth. It ensures equal employment opportunities in the government and insures against discrimination by the State in matters of employment on the basis of caste, religion, etc. This right also includes the abolition of titles as well as untouchability.

Aspirants can read more about Right to Equality in the linked article.

2. Right to Freedom (Articles 19 – 22)

Freedom is one of the most important ideals cherished by any democratic society. The Indian Constitution guarantees freedom to citizens. The freedom right includes many rights such as:

- Freedom of speech
- Freedom of expression
- Freedom of assembly without arms
- Freedom of association
- Freedom to practise any profession
- Freedom to reside in any part of the country

Read more on the Right to Freedom in the linked article.

Some of these rights are subject to certain conditions of state security, public morality and decency and friendly relations with foreign countries. This means that the State has the right to impose reasonable restrictions on them.

Aspirants can find the details on Right to Life (Article 21), in the linked article.

3. Right against Exploitation (Articles 23 – 24)

This right implies the prohibition of traffic in human beings, begar, and other forms of forced labour. It also implies the prohibition of children in factories, etc. The Constitution prohibits the employment of children under 14 years in hazardous conditions.

Read more on the Right against Exploitation in the linked article.

4. Right to Freedom of Religion (Articles 25 – 28)

This indicates the secular nature of Indian polity. There is equal respect given to all religions. There is freedom of conscience, profession, practice and propagation of religion. The State has no official religion. Every person has the right to freely practice his or her faith, establish and maintain religious and charitable institutions.

Read more on the Right to Freedom of Religion in the linked article.

5. Cultural and Educational Rights (Articles 29 – 30)

These rights protect the rights of religious, cultural and linguistic minorities, by facilitating them to preserve their heritage and culture. Educational rights are for ensuring education for everyone without any discrimination.

Read more on Cultural and Educational Rights in the linked article.

6. Right to Constitutional Remedies (32 – 35)

The Constitution guarantees remedies if citizens' fundamental rights are violated. The government cannot infringe upon or curb anyone's rights. When these rights are violated, the aggrieved party can approach the courts. Citizens can even go directly to the Supreme Court which can issue writs for enforcing fundamental rights.

Read more on Right to Constitutional Remedies (Article 32) in the linked article.

All civil services exam aspirants must go through the features of the Fundamental Rights discussed further below in this article.

Features of Fundamental Rights

- Fundamental rights are different from ordinary legal rights in the manner in which they are enforced. If a legal right is violated, the aggrieved person cannot directly approach the SC bypassing the lower courts. He or she should first approach the lower courts.
- Some of the fundamental rights are available to all citizens while the rest are for all persons (citizens and foreigners).
- Fundamental rights are not absolute rights. They have reasonable restrictions, which means they are subject to the conditions of state security, public morality and decency and friendly relations with foreign countries.
- They are justiciable, implying they are enforceable by courts. People can approach the SC directly in case of violation of fundamental rights.

- Fundamental rights can be amended by the Parliament by a constitutional amendment but only if the amendment does not alter the basic structure of the Constitution.
- Fundamental rights can be suspended during a national emergency. But, the rights guaranteed under Articles 20 and 21 cannot be suspended.
- The application of fundamental rights can be restricted in an area that has been placed under martial law or military rule.

Fundamental Rights Available Only to Citizens

The following is the list of fundamental rights that are available only to citizens (and not to foreigners):

1. Prohibition of discrimination on grounds of race, religion, caste, gender or place of birth (Article 15).
2. Equality of opportunity in matters of public employment (Article 16).
3. Protection of freedom of:(Article 19)
    - Speech and expression
    - Association
    - Assembly
    - Movement
    - Residence
    - Profession
4. Protection of the culture, language and script of minorities (Article 29).
5. Right of minorities to establish and administer educational institutions (Article 30).

Importance of Fundamental Rights

Fundamental rights are very important because they are like the backbone of the country. They are essential for safeguarding the people's interests.

According to Article 13, all laws that are violative of fundamental rights shall be void. Here, there is an express provision for judicial review. The SC and the High Courts can declare any law unconstitutional on the grounds that it is violative of the fundamental rights. Article 13 talks about not just laws, but also ordinances, orders, regulations, notifications, etc.

Amendability of Fundamental Rights

Any changes to the fundamental rights require a constitutional amendment that should be passed by both the Houses of Parliament. The amendment bill should be passed by a special majority of Parliament.

Read about the types of majorities in the Indian Parliament in the linked article.

As per the Constitution, Article 13(2) states that no laws can be made that take away fundamental rights.

The question is whether a constitutional amendment act can be termed law or not.

In the Sajjan Singh case of 1965, the Supreme Court held that the Parliament can amend any part of the Constitution including fundamental rights.

But in 1967, the SC reversed its stance taken earlier when in the verdict of the Golaknath case, it said that the fundamental rights cannot be amended.

In 1973, a landmark judgement ensued in the Kesavananda Bharati case, where the SC held that although no part of the Constitution, including Fundamental Rights, was beyond the Parliament's amending power, the "basic structure of the Constitution could not be abrogated even by a constitutional amendment."

This is the basis in Indian law in which the judiciary can strike down any amendment passed by Parliament that is in conflict with the basic structure of the Constitution.

In 1981, the Supreme Court reiterated the Basic Structure doctrine.

It also drew a line of demarcation as April 24th, 1973 i.e., the date of the Kesavananda Bharati judgement, and held that it should not be applied retrospectively to reopen the validity of any amendment to the Constitution which took place prior to that date.

Aspirants can learn more about 25 important SC judgements for UPSC in the linked article.

Doctrine of Severability

This is a doctrine that protects the fundamental rights enshrined in the Constitution.

It is also known as the Doctrine of Separability.

It is mentioned in Article 13, according to which all laws that were enforced in India before the commencement of the Constitution, inconsistent with the provisions of fundamental rights shall to the extent of that inconsistency be void.

This implies that only the parts of the statute that is inconsistent shall be deemed void and not the whole statue. Only those provisions which are inconsistent with fundamental rights shall be void.

Doctrine of Eclipse

This doctrine states that any law that violates fundamental rights is not null or void ab initio, but is only non-enforceable, i.e., it is not dead but inactive.

This implies that whenever that fundamental right (which was violated by the law) is struck down, the law becomes active again (is revived).

Another point to note is that the doctrine of eclipse applies only to pre-constitutional laws (laws that were enacted before the Constitution came into force) and not to post-constitutional laws.

This means that any post-constitutional law which is violative of a fundamental right is void ab initio.

Aspirants can also get details about the IAS Topper and take inspiration from their preparation strategy and excel in the upcoming UPSC CSE.

Conclusion

To know how many fundamental rights are there in the Indian Constitution is a must-rule for an IAS aspirant. The list of fundamental rights given above will be helpful for the candidates in their UPSC preparation. Also, aspirants should know the difference between human rights and fundamental rights. The basic difference between human rights and fundamental rights is the scope of acceptance. While fundamental rights have scope within a country, human rights are accepted worldwide.

Workshop on "Consumer rights"

Date: 24.12.2022

Time: 10.00 am to 12.00 pm

Topic: Consumer rights

Facilitators: Ms. Ashika and Ms. Sarojini, Student mentor teachers

No.of Participants: 23 Students

Workshop on "Consumer rights" was held at Ilakku on 24th December 2022. It was facilitated by our student mentor teachers Ms. Ashika and Ms. Sarojini.it was a participatory session. They explained the following in the session. What is consumer right? Means right to be informed about the quality, quantity, potency, purity, standard and price of goods so as to protect the consumer against unfair trade practices. Consumer should insist on getting all the information about the product or service before making a choice or a decision.

Right to safety

Means right to be protected against the marketing of goods and services, which are hazardous to life and property. The purchased goods and services availed of should not only meet their immediate needs, but also fulfil long term interests. Before purchasing, consumers should insist on the quality of the products as well as on the guarantee of the products and services. They should preferably purchase quality marked products such as ISI, AGMARK, etc.

Right to choose

Means right to be assured, wherever possible of access to variety of goods and services at competitive price. In case of monopolies, it means right to be assured of satisfactory quality and service at a fair price. It also includes right to basic goods and services. This is because unrestricted right of the minority to choose can mean a denial for the majority of its fair share. This right can be better exercised in a competitive market where a variety of goods are available at competitive prices.

Right to be informed

Means right to be informed about the quality, quantity, potency, purity, standard and price of goods so as to protect the consumer against unfair trade practices. Consumer should insist on getting all the information about the product or service before making a choice or a decision. This will enable him to act wisely and responsibly and also enable him to desist from falling prey to high pressure selling techniques.

Right to consumer education

Means the right to acquire the knowledge and skill to be an informed consumer throughout life. Ignorance of consumers, particularly of rural consumers, is mainly responsible for their exploitation. They should know their rights and must exercise them. Only then real consumer protection can be achieved with success.

Right to be heard

Means that consumer's interests will receive due consideration at appropriate forums. It also includes right to be represented in various forums formed to consider the consumer's welfare. The Consumers should form non-political and non-commercial consumer organizations which can be given representation in various committees formed by the Government and other bodies in matters relating to consumers.

Right to seek redressal: Means right to seek redressal against unfair trade practices or unscrupulous exploitation of consumers. It also includes right to fair settlement of the genuine grievances of the consumer. Consumers must make complaint for their genuine grievances. Many a times their complaint may be of small value but its impact on the society as a whole may be very large. They can also take the help of consumer organisations in seeking redressal of their grievances.

As the markets are globalizing, the direct link between the manufacturer and the final user getting distant, post purchase grievances have to be heard through a strong redressal system. For this, Consumer disputes redressal agencies (popularly known as Consumer Forums or Consumer Courts) are set up under the Act at District, State and National level to provide simple and inexpensive quick redressal against consumer complaints. The District forum deals with complaints where the compensation sought is less than 23 lakhs. This limit is commonly known as the 'pecuniary jurisdiction' of the Consumer Redressal Forum. The State Forum deals with the complaints where the value of the goods and services and compensation claimed does not exceed rupees one crore and the National Forum entertains the complaints where the value of the goods or services and compensation claimed exceeds rupees one crore.
The Consumer Forum can order the company to take the following actions once it hears the complaint and decides that the company is at fault:

- Correct deficiencies in the product to what they claim.
- Repair defects free of charges
- Replace the product with a similar or superior product
- Issue a full refund of the price
- Pay compensation for damages/costs / inconveniences
- Withdraw the sale of the product altogether
- Discontinue or not repeat any unfair trade practice or the restrictive trade practice
- Issue corrective advertisement for any earlier misrepresentation.

Consumer Protection Act: An Act to provide for the protection of the interests of consumers and for the said purpose, to establish authorities for timely and effective administration and settlement of consumers' disputes and for matters connected therewith." (According to Consumer Protection Act, 2019).

"An Act to provide for better protection of the interests of consumers and for that purpose to make provision for the establishment of consumer councils and other authorities for the settlement of consumers' disputes and for matters connected therewith."(According to Consumer Protection Act, 1986).Consumer Protection Act, 1986 seeks to promote and protect the interest of consumers against deficiencies and defects in goods or services. It also seeks to secure the rights of a consumer against unfair or restrictive trade practices. This act was passed in Lok Sabha on 9th December 1986 and Rajya Sabha on 10th December 1986 and assented to by the President of India on 24th December 1986, and was published in the Gazette of India on 26th December 1986.
